GIBSON DUNN

Jason Schwartz Discusses Noncompete Clauses in Employment Contracts with AmLaw Litigation Daily

In the Media | October 24, 2025

The AmLaw Litigation Daily

The AmLaw Litigation Daily (subscription required) recently spoke with partner Jason Schwartz about the current state of noncompete clauses in employment contracts. Jason noted that while the FTC's non-compete ban has been struck down, the Trump administration remains "skeptical" of the overuse of noncompetes and it would be a mistake to think the administration has no problem with them.

"It's not going to be that every noncompete is illegal, but if you're a company using noncompetes, you'd better be thoughtful about how you do it and make sure that you don't overreach," Jason said.

Related People

Jason C. Schwartz

© 2026 Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher LLP. All rights reserved. For contact and other information, please visit us at www.gibsondunn.com. | www.gibsondunn.com