Palo Alto

Zaneta Kim is an associate in the Palo Alto office of Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher. She is a member of the firm's Litigation Department. Her practice focuses on securities, cyber/data privacy and other complex business litigations. Zaneta also represents companies, boards and special committees in government and internal investigations and routinely handles other shareholder and securities related matters, such as responding to books and records demands and FINRA inquiries.

Representative matters include securing an appellate win upholding the dismissal of securities claims against a company that provides online personal styling services, securing dismissals of class action privacy claims alleging violations of wiretap law in connection with online retailers' use of session replay technology, and representing an international logistics company in a DOJ's antitrust investigation involving a bid-rigging conspiracy.

Zaneta earned her law degree from Georgetown Law in 2017. While in law school, she served as a student attorney in Georgetown Law's Appellate Litigation Clinic and as a judicial extern in the Superior Court of the District of Columbia. She received her Bachelor of Arts from University of California – Los Angeles in 2013.

Zaneta is a member of the California Bar and is admitted to practice before the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit; the Northern, Southern, Central, and Eastern District Courts of California; and California state courts.

Prior to joining Gibson Dunn, Zaneta was an associate at another leading global law firm.
