Matthew Roose's recent arrival as a partner in the firm's New York office garnered significant coverage from leading legal and industry publications, highlighting his robust experience in representing creditors in liability management transactions and the continued growth of the firm's Business Restructuring and Reorganization Practice Group.

Global Legal Insights reported that Matthew's practice focuses on out-of-court restructurings, special situations and liability management exercises, distressed acquisitions, and in-court Chapter 11 processes. Scott Greenberg, Global Chair of the Business Restructuring and Reorganization Practice Group, said in a statement, "Matt combines exceptional creditor-side fluency with extensive liability management experience and strong credibility with our existing client base."

Global Restructuring Review noted that Matthew advised noteholders in the English restructuring of Fossil and convertible noteholders in Wolfspeed's prepackaged Chapter 11, while WSJ Pro Bankruptcy reported that he represented creditor ad hoc groups in the Luminar Technologies and Exela Technologies Chapter 11 cases.

Bloomberg Law described Matthew's arrival as reflecting growing competition for lawyers who can advise on out-of-court distressed debt situations, indicating that Gibson Dunn has become a top firm for representing creditors on liability management transactions. The American Lawyer separately included the move in its look at a wave of lateral restructuring hires driven by demand for liability management and private credit work.
