Private Equity Co-Chair Wim De Vlieger was quoted in Bloomberg's (subscription required) Going Private newsletter in "The Flaw in EU Inc," which looks at the European Commission's proposal for a single company law framework across the EU.

Wim said it is time for EU Inc. to be introduced, and that it should stay as close as possible to the Commission's original proposal, so the market can begin the next discussion: How to introduce a single set of venture financing documentation in Europe. On that question, he argued the market should push for a single global standard for venture financings rather than a European-only set. He suggested the European venture community adopt NVCA-based model documents, with a thin overlay for each European country where required, as the Canadian market has done.
