Emma Khairallah is an associate in the London office of Gibson Dunn and a member of the firm's Investment Funds Practice Group. She is dual-qualified in England & Wales and New York.

Emma's practice is focused on advising sovereign wealth funds, pension funds, funds of funds, and other institutional investors on their global investments into private funds across a range of asset classes, including credit, private equity, real estate, and infrastructure. Her experience spans primary commitments, co-investments, and secondary market transactions. She also provides clients with ongoing advice in connection with their investments, including transfers of interests, most-favoured-nation processes, and custodian transitions.

Prior to joining Gibson Dunn, Emma worked at another leading international law firm. Prior to that, she worked in-house at a specialist alternative asset manager in London, and in the private equities team of a large Abu Dhabi-based sovereign wealth fund.
