Alex Ogren is an associate in the Washington, D.C. office of Gibson Dunn. He practices in the Litigation Department.

Alex has experience in a wide range of commercial litigation disputes at all stages of litigation, with a focus on trade secrets disputes. He helped secure a complete defense to trade secret misappropriation claims in an arbitration brought by a major software company against a former licensee, and assisted in obtaining an injunction preventing former Palantir employees from continuing their plan to “pillage” Palantir engineers to build a copycat business and requiring forensic remediation to address theft of confidential information (Palantir v. Jain, et al. (S.D.N.Y. 2026)).

His other representative experience includes helping Amazon obtain a jury verdict for civil RICO and other claims in connection with a kickback scheme associated with data center developments (Amazon.com, Inc. v. WDC Holdings, et al. (E.D. Va. 2026), as well as the dismissal of a shareholder lawsuit regarding Carvana’s capital structure. He has also represented companies in a number of antitrust disputes, including LIV Golf in major antitrust litigation against the PGA Tour, a large third-party tech company as part of the state and federal monopoly claims against Google, and an energy company in state antitrust claims brought by a competitor. He has also advised clients on litigation risk associated with proposed ballot initiatives, potential antitrust claims, and environmental regulation compliance.

Prior to joining Gibson Dunn, Alex clerked for the Honorable William Kayatta, Jr., of the United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

He received his Juris Doctor, magna cum laude, from Northwestern Pritzker School of Law, where he was an executive editor for the Northwestern University Law Review. He was also a licensed student attorney in Northwestern’s Supreme Court Clinic, where he participated in cert and merits stage briefing for several cases. Alex graduated summa cum laude from the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, studying economics and political science.
