Prominent Energy and Infrastructure Financing Dealmaker Gianluca Bacchiocchi Joins Gibson Dunn in New York as Structured Finance Co-Chair

Firm News | September 28, 2026

Gibson Dunn announced today that structured finance lawyer Gianluca Bacchiocchi has joined the firm's New York office as a partner in the Energy and Infrastructure Practice Group and as Co-Chair of the Structured Finance Practice Group.

Gianluca advises clients on sophisticated financings across the energy and infrastructure sectors, with particular experience in data centers and digital infrastructure, power and renewables, and other major infrastructure projects in the U.S. and globally. His practice spans structured finance, private capital, insurance capital, bank lending, and capital markets transactions, and he has significant experience in Latin America.

"The largest data center financings now run to tens of billions of dollars and increasingly draw on private capital alongside traditional bank lending," said Tomer Pinkusiewicz, Co-Chair of Gibson Dunn's Energy and Infrastructure Practice Group. "Gianluca has been advising on these transactions for years, structuring financings across multiple sources of capital. Bringing that expertise together with our real estate, energy and infrastructure, and private capital teams gives clients even greater depth across both the asset and the financing."

"Gibson Dunn is exceptionally well positioned for where the infrastructure market is headed," said Gianluca. "AI is driving investment in data centers and other critical infrastructure at an extraordinary scale requiring increasingly sophisticated financing structures across the capital markets. That convergence plays directly to my practice, and the opportunity to build on the breadth and strength of Gibson Dunn's platform was incredibly compelling to me."

Gianluca's arrival builds on the recent expansion of Gibson Dunn's energy and infrastructure platform, including Jamal Lama in New York, Noah Hansford and Terrie Khoshbin in Dallas, James Johnson and Victoria Delacey in London, Clay Brett and Omar Samji in Houston, and Waleed Rasrommani in Riyadh. These additions deepen the firm's capabilities across project and structured finance, private capital, M&A, and other complex energy and infrastructure transactions, particularly in data centers and digital infrastructure.
