Partner Michael Kahn was profiled by Bloomberg Law [PDF] after being named to its They’ve Got Next: The 40 Under 40 list. He described how he uses AI “to pressure-test theories and surface counterarguments before opposing counsel does” and to digest dense documents so he can focus on legal analysis. “For example, I’ve used it to comb a lengthy prospectus for the disclosures that undercut a plaintiff’s omissions claim and to distill multiple documents for facts needed to analyze securities trading — work that once consumed hours before the strategic analysis could begin,” he said.

Michael also discussed a pro bono victory representing a death row inmate, where he was part of a team that uncovered evidence of juror misconduct and successfully proved that the misconduct violated the client’s constitutional rights. The court ultimately vacated the client’s death sentence. “Being part of a team that helped achieve that outcome — and knowing that our work had a literal life-or-death impact — was deeply meaningful and remains one of the proudest moments of my career.”
