GIBSON DUNN

Gibson Dunn Expands Premier Antitrust Practice with Brussels Partner Adam Dawson

Firm News | August 26, 2025

Gibson Dunn announced today that Adam Dawson has joined the firm's Brussels office as a partner in its Antitrust and Competition Practice Group.

Adam brings extensive experience in merger control and foreign investment screening, having advised clients on complex global transactions and coordinated filings across multiple jurisdictions.

"Adam's arrival marks a significant step in the growth of our European antitrust platform," said Christian Riis-Madsen, Co-Chair of Gibson Dunn's Antitrust and Competition Practice Group and partner in charge of Gibson Dunn's Brussels office. "His deep experience in merger control and antitrust matters, especially in the life sciences and technology sectors, complements our global practice and enhances our ability to serve clients in complex cross-border matters. Adam's strong relationships and business development acumen make him a valuable addition to our team."

"I am thrilled to join Gibson Dunn's outstanding team in Brussels," said Adam. "The firm's exceptional global reach and collaborative culture offer an ideal environment to grow the practice and better serve clients in Europe and beyond. I look forward to contributing to the continued success of the Antitrust and Competition Practice Group."

About Adam Dawson

Adam represents clients in high-stakes merger investigations, including negotiating remedies with competition authorities worldwide. His practice also includes advising on competition law complaints and investigations by the European Commission and national competition authorities. Adam advises clients across a broad range of industries, including human and animal health, digital platforms, chemicals, energy, packaging, and air transport. He is admitted to practice in Brussels.
