Hart Energy (subscription required) reported comments made by partner Rahul Vashi at their recent A&D Strategies & Opportunities conference. “Low and flat [commodity pricing] is a hard time to get deals done,” Rahul said.

He also discussed the fact that it can be difficult to close a deal if prices get “too steep” but waiting around on the perfect cycle isn’t recommended. “As the old axiom goes, time kills deals,” Rahul said. “It’s just a more favorable environment. There were assets sitting on the market through ‘24, ‘25 where frankly the hold case was stronger than the sell case. And now you have this uplift in prices. You have a lot of good reasons to pay for inventory again, and you’re seeing it in the deal market.”
