GIBSON DUNN

Jamie France Quoted by Global Competition Review on U.S. Federal Trade Commission's Second Request Rules Overhaul

In the Media | October 7, 2026

Global Competition Review

Partner Jamie France is quoted in Global Competition Review's (subscription required) "Second Request Overhaul Seals Shift From Biden-Era Probes, Lawyers Say," which discusses the U.S. Federal Trade Commission's updating the agency's rules to give staff greater flexibility when negotiating modified second requests.

Jamie noted that while FTC staff previously considered several factors including the competitive issues involved and the relative burdens of producing the requested information, the codification of these factors provides additional clarity. "It is important for parties to engage the FTC under this framework because it provides for these more explicit avenues for getting a second request modification granted," she said. "It's helpful to parties that this is more explicitly codified because they can really lean on the factors more in the written requests for a modification."

Related People

Jamie E. France

Related Capabilities

Antitrust and Competition

© 2026 Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher LLP. All rights reserved. For contact and other information, please visit us at www.gibsondunn.com. | www.gibsondunn.com