GIBSON DUNN

Jury Orders Greenpeace to Pay Pipeline Company More Than $660 Million

In the Media | March 19, 2025

The New York Times

The New York Times quoted Trey Cox, counsel to Energy Transfer, in its coverage of a jury's verdict to award over $660 million in damages to Energy Transfer, holding Greenpeace accountable for its role in the Dakota Access Pipeline protests. Read the full article in The New York Times (subscription required).

Related People

Trey Cox

Related Capabilities

Litigation

© 2026 Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher LLP. All rights reserved. For contact and other information, please visit us at www.gibsondunn.com. | www.gibsondunn.com