Partner Karin Portlock was interviewed recently by Tulsa TV stations KTUL and KJRH about Gibson Dunn's lawsuit filed against Tulsa Public Schools on behalf of a parent of a special needs student. The lawsuit alleges that the school district did not protect the student after he was brutally assaulted by a teaching assistant – an incident that was captured by school surveillance cameras. "We've seen this video," Karin said. "It's a gruesome assault of a vulnerable child. It is something that is just horrific to see and should never happen to a human being, especially a student within the care of the school system."
