Lydia Allaby-Tiller is an English-qualified associate in the London office of Gibson Dunn. She is a member of the firm's Litigation and International Arbitration Groups.

Her practice focuses on high-profile, multijurisdictional litigation in the High Court, Court of Appeal and Supreme Court, with particular expertise in arbitral award challenges involving sovereign states, civil fraud, complex data infringement matters in the technology sector, and banking disputes.

She is recognised as a key lawyer for Premium Commercial Litigation in The Legal 500 UK 2025 and 2026 rankings, described as “incisive and a brilliant litigation mind” with “great drive, determination, and ability to marshal a team to great effect” and “an absolute star partner of the future”.

Lydia has represented sovereign states, high net worth individuals, and clients across a range of industries including technology, professional services, financial services, transport, and real estate. She also advises on crisis management and public law matters.

She maintains a strong interest in strategic human rights litigation, having worked with NGOs such as REDRESS, ILGA-Europe, and the European Council for Refugees and Exiles. Her experience includes bringing cases before the European Court of Human Rights and the African Commission on Human and Peoples' Rights.

Prior to joining Gibson Dunn, Lydia was a managing associate at another law firm.
