Riyadh

Sara Almahayni is an associate in Gibson Dunn's Riyadh office. She specializes in capital markets and corporate law, bringing comprehensive experience in both transactional matters and regulatory frameworks. Her diverse practice includes drafting key regulations and legislation for various Saudi government entities, actively contributing to the creation and refinement of essential legal infrastructures and advising on the establishment and structuring of new entities within Saudi Arabia.

Prior to joining Gibson Dunn, Sara honed her expertise at a semi-governmental organization, where she focused on contracts and commercial agreements. She holds a Bachelor of Laws from King Saud University and earned her Master of Laws degree from Duke University.

Representative Experience

- Facilitated the incorporation of numerous companies in Saudi Arabia and advised international corporations on relocating their regional headquarters.
- Successfully worked on complex regulatory projects, providing strategic analysis and comprehensive guidance on Saudi legal and regulatory compliance.
- Actively participated on capital market transactions, skillfully addressing both issuer and investor considerations and delivering strategic, commercially informed insights.
