Jeremy Bunting is a litigation associate in the New York office of Gibson, Dunn, & Crutcher. He maintains a wide practice across all stages of commercial litigation and white collar defense work, including trial. Jeremy has litigated high-stakes matters at the trial and appellate level, in New York federal and state court, as well as California federal court, the Delaware Court of Chancery, and several other jurisdictions, including confidential arbitration. Jeremy has extensive experience with motion practice, including drafting dispositive and discovery motions, as well as motions for sanctions. He is well-versed in supervising discovery across his matters, with years of experience preparing for and taking depositions, and managing written and document discovery.

Representative matters include:

- Represented Meta in several high-profile data privacy litigations.
- Represented Bob Dylan in multiple matters at the trial and appellate level, including securing sanctions against attorneys that engaged in discovery misconduct.
- Secured favorable settlement on behalf of alternative investment manager in DGCL 225 action to determine rightful leadership of startup.
- Represented large tech company in confidential DOJ investigation alleging violations of privacy laws.
- Represented public insurance company in confidential DOJ investigation alleging filing of fraudulent SEC filings.
- Defended multiple AmLaw 100 firms in legal malpractice actions.
- Represented pro bono clients in immigration, housing, and police brutality matters.

Jeremy graduated cum laude from New York University School of Law in 2017, where he was an Articles Editor for the Annual Survey of American Law and an active member of the Latino Law Students Association. Jeremy received his Bachelor of Arts in Philosophy and Political Science magna cum laude from Fordham University in 2014, with Departmental Honors in both areas.
