Alison Friberg is Of Counsel in the Washington, D.C. office of Gibson Dunn. She is a member of the firm's Antitrust and Competition Group.

Alison's practice focuses on criminal and civil antitrust investigations. Alison represents companies and individuals involved in investigations by competition enforcement authorities, conducts confidential internal investigations, and advises clients with respect to corporate compliance.

Most recently, Alison served as a trial attorney in the U.S. Department of Justice's Antitrust Division, where she investigated and litigated antitrust matters involving price fixing, bid rigging, customer allocation, no-poach agreements, and other related offenses. Alison also served on the Antitrust Division's Procurement and Collusion Strike Force. As part of that role, she trained government procurement officials and law enforcement agents about the detection, prevention, and investigation of antitrust violations. Prior to her government service, Alison was an associate at Gibson Dunn focusing on antitrust investigations.

Alison received her law degree from the University of Virginia School of Law, where she served as Development Editor for the Journal of Law and Politics. She received her undergraduate degree from the University of Maryland.
