New York

Pablo Garrido is an international dispute resolution associate in the New York office of Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher. He is a member the firm's International Arbitration and Investigations practices.

Pablo focuses his practice on commercial and investor-state arbitrations, representing corporate entities as well as governments and state-owned entities in relation with business disputes, investment protection and international trade. He has represented clients in arbitration proceedings conducted under the major arbitration rules, both in commercial and investor-state arbitrations. Pablo also has experience in counseling clients in complex contractual disputes and also has previously assisted clients on a number of complex due diligence and compliance issues.

Prior joining Gibson Dunn, he regularly provided compliance-related work on anti-corruption issues (including advising on FCPA and local anti-corruption laws across Latin America), anti-money laundering laws and a wide variety of regulatory issues involved in multi-jurisdictional reviews. He has provided training to corporate personnel across different jurisdictions and has conducted confidential internal investigations on behalf of corporate clients.

Pablo is admitted to practice in the State of New York.
