Lauren Goldman is a litigation partner in the New York office of Gibson Dunn. She is Co-Chair of the Mass Torts and Product Liability Practice Group and of the Technology Litigation Practice Group. Lauren's practice focuses on high-stakes class- and mass-action disputes, particularly in the areas of product liability and data privacy.

Lauren serves as national counsel for several consumer-products companies facing mass litigation dockets across the United States. For more than two decades, she has developed and executed comprehensive legal strategies for companies facing sprawling multi-forum litigation. Lauren has also briefed and argued legal issues in connection with numerous high-stakes jury and bench trials, and has handled many successful appeals from large verdicts. She has a particular expertise with punitive damages litigation and has successfully challenged numerous excessive awards at trial and on appeal.

Lauren also serves as lead counsel for major technology and social media companies in putative class actions alleging privacy violations under the Illinois Biometric Information Privacy Act, the Wiretap Act, the Stored Communications Act, the California Invasion of Privacy Act, the Telephone Consumer Protection Act and various common-law privacy doctrines.

Lauren is ranked by Chambers USA in Litigation: General Commercial – New York, Litigation: Privacy & Data Security – USA – Nationwide, and Product Liability & Mass Torts – USA – Nationwide, reflecting her exceptional command of complex, high-stakes litigation. Clients consistently describe her as "an extraordinary legal strategist and communicator" with "superb instincts" and "a rare ability to simplify the complex and make it compelling." She is hailed as "one of the best brief writers" and "a brilliant thinker on her feet," with a reputation for "leading companies through the most challenging litigation with clarity and confidence." Clients also emphasize her "outstanding client service," "clear and organized advocacy," and "unmatched ability to turn intricate fact patterns into persuasive, judge-ready arguments." One summed it up: "Lauren is really talented—she just gets it."

Legal 500 has repeatedly recognized Lauren in its Appellate: Court of Appeals, Appellate: Supreme Courts (States and Federal) and Cyber Law (Including Data Privacy And Data Protection) guides. Legal 500 says that she is "noted for her impressive record in class actions, with an emphasis on data privacy and product liability-related cases." It quotes clients who say she is "a superb relationship partner who drafts excellent briefs and provides great judgment on all legal issues." She is "super client-focused, extremely responsive, an excellent writer, and a poised and prepared oral advocate," whose work is "well-reasoned, concise, well-organized, and business-focused." Clients describe her as "smart, hardworking, and very analytical," with an "unmatched ability to work well with other lawyers."
