Howard S. Hogan is a partner in the Washington, D.C. office of Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher and is chair of the Consumer and Retail practice group. Over the course of his career, Howard has handled numerous complex cases in a variety of federal and state courts in several different substantive areas including general commercial, securities and employment matters, and internal investigations.

Howard has been repeatedly recognized as a leading voice in the intellectual property legal community, including being highly ranked in Chambers USA, by Managing IP as an IP Star for both trademark and copyright matters, in World Trademark Review's list of "World's Leading Trademark Professionals" and its "Global Leaders Guide," and in serving as a committee chair with the International Trademark Association. In 2024, WTR described Howard as a "tenacious litigator" who "knows how to deliver a convincing argument and makes all the right strategic moves to put an end to disputes swiftly."

Howard's practice focuses on IP litigation and counseling, including trademark, false advertising, copyright, right of publicity, licensing, trade secret, and patent matters. Howard has represented various corporations and individuals in a broad range of industries, including fashion, cosmetics, pharmaceuticals, financial services, sports, entertainment, transportation, and online services. A significant portion of Howard's practice involves computer, Internet, and new media-related issues. Many of Howard's matters have tested the application of traditional legal principles to the Internet and emerging technologies, such as in connection with issues of Internet jurisdiction, online contracting, and the application of trademark and copyright law to search engines, social media, mobile apps, and artificial intelligence. Howard has been involved in cutting edge matters concerning the protection of data, and he has assisted clients with several substantial trade secrets and information security matters. Howard also represents clients in connection with rights of publicity, Name Image and Likeness (NIL) rights, and the developing legal framework that governs uses of digital replicas.

Representative Matters

- Represented TikTok and ByteDance Ltd. in a seven-day trademark infringement trial where plaintiffs asked the jury to award $116 million in damages. Howard's direct and cross-examinations of expert witnesses helped convince the jury to unanimously reject the plaintiff's claims.
- Represented a real estate company in a trademark infringement case before the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. Howard and the Gibson Dunn team convinced the appellate court to reverse the district court's grant of judgment and to reinstate the plaintiff's claims.
- Served as lead counsel to A SHOC Beverage, LLC and Keurig Dr Pepper Inc. in a trade dress and false advertising lawsuit brought by the owner of the Celsius beverage brand that sought to ban the A SHOC Accelerator product from the marketplace. The district court granted Gibson Dunn's motion to dismiss the claims with prejudice and ordered that plaintiff's counsel reimburse defendants for $249,357 in fees.

- Represented Brooks Sports, Inc. in a hotly contested trademark infringement suit in the Eastern District of Virginia against a prominent Chinese sporting goods company. Howard and the Gibson Dunn team built an extensive record of the defendant's extreme discovery misconduct, leading to a default judgment sanction in Brooks' favor. The parties then entered into a settlement agreement.
- Argued a high-profile copyright case before the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, which resulted in a published decision reversing an injunction that had purported to prohibit the sale and marketing of an allegedly infringing book written by Gibson Dunn's client.
- Served as lead counsel to Kimberly-Clark Corporation in a trademark infringement action seeking millions of dollars in damages because of Kimberly-Clark's alleged use of the plaintiff's registered phrase in online advertising. After eliciting testimony in which the plaintiff admitted that he could not meet his required burden of establishing a likelihood of confusion, the case was resolved on confidential terms.
- Represented Heaven's Door Spirits LLC, marketer of its "Heaven's Door" line of premium whiskeys in partnership with Bob Dylan, in connection with a trademark infringement action that sought an injunction banning the product. The parties entered into a confidential settlement agreement and "Heaven's Door" whiskey continues to be sold throughout the United States.
- Represented Gucci America, Inc., Balenciaga America, Inc., Tiffany & Co., and other luxury brands in a series of trademark infringement actions against operators of websites that sell counterfeit goods, resulting in awards of millions of dollars in damages and broad injunctive relief. In 2009, Howard and the Gibson Dunn team brought claims in the Southern District of New York against Woodforest National Bank and others for their role in processing credit card orders for counterfeits. In June 2010, in a closely watched decision, the court denied the defendants' motion to dismiss, finding that Gucci's complaint sufficiently stated a contributory trademark liability claim. Later, in Gucci America, Inc. v. Li, a different court granted Gibson Dunn's motion to compel the Bank of China to produce counterfeiters' bank records, despite claims that the documents were protected under Chinese law, and denied the Bank's cross-motion to relieve its obligation to freeze the counterfeiters' accounts. The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit affirmed that decision in relevant part and subsequently refused to stay the district court's further order holding the Bank of China in contempt of court and assessing daily fines of $50,000 per day. The matter settled on confidential terms.
- Represented Capital One Financial Corporation in a lawsuit against the most senior officers of BankUnited, Inc., for violation of non-competition agreements that they had entered into in connection with the sale of North Fork Bank to Capital One in 2006 for $13.2 billion. The case settled on favorable terms after Capital One prevailed in a number of discovery disputes, and after the district court denied Defendants' motion for summary judgment. Under the terms of the settlement agreement, Capital One received $20 million in cash, and Defendants agreed to additional non-monetary relief.
- Represented American Airlines, Inc. in a cutting-edge and hard-fought trademark dispute with Google seeking broad injunctive relief and extensive damages concerning the use of American's trademarks in Google's search advertising programs. After intense discovery battles, Gibson Dunn successfully argued to the Court that Google should be sanctioned by requiring Google to provide direct access to its extensive electronic databases so that American could show substantial trademark violations and extensive damages. The case was settled pursuant to a confidential settlement agreement. Gibson Dunn also represented American Airlines in a similar lawsuit against Yahoo alleging identical claims, and Yahoo also settled on the eve of an evidentiary hearing concerning Yahoo's alleged discovery misconduct.
