Andrew Kilberg is a partner in Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher's Washington, D.C. office, where he practices in the firm's litigation department. A member of the firm's Labor and Employment, Administrative and Regulatory, and Appellate and Constitutional Law practice groups, Andrew has significant experience challenging onerous federal regulations, advising on regulatory proposals, and defending agency enforcement actions and investigations. He has represented clients in federal district and appellate courts and before the U.S. Supreme Court, as well as before various agencies.

Andrew's private practice and government experience has touched a broad array of federal and state agencies. He has engaged with all major federal agencies in the labor and employment field, including the Wage and Hour Division, Employee Benefits Security Administration, Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation, Federal Retirement Thrift Investment Board, National Labor Relations Board, Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, Occupational Safety and Health Administration, and Mine Safety and Health Administration. His matters at the Firm and government experience have also involved the Department of Justice, Federal Trade Commission, Federal Communications Commission, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, Office of the United States Trade Representative, and Department of Housing and Urban Development, among others.

Andrew's litigation matters have covered wage and hour, ERISA, restrictive covenants, occupational safety and health, anti-discrimination, whistleblower, and labor relations issues, among other subjects. In addition to his work in court, Andrew regularly authors comment letters submitted to federal agencies, including the Department of Labor, the Federal Trade Commission, and the Federal Communications Commission. He also has written position statements submitted to the National Labor Relations Board and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, and represented clients in highly sensitive agency investigations and audits.

Andrew also has provided extensive advice and counseling on a wide range of subjects, including federal and state non-compete and vaccine-related rules and litigation, the False Claims Act, government contracting (including suspension and debarment issues), anti-discrimination and anti-retaliation matters, labor relations, and ERISA issues.

Between 2019 and 2021, Andrew served as Counselor to Secretary Eugene Scalia at the United States Department of Labor. In that role, he advised the Secretary and Deputy Secretary on a wide range of matters and led teams on important regulatory and other projects for the Office of the Secretary, including matters concerning environmental, social, and governance investing, proxy voting, the U.S.-Mexico-Canada Agreement, independent contractor status, apprenticeships, religious accommodation, anti-discrimination, and the coronavirus pandemic. He also was responsible for coordination with several other executive branch agencies.
