Connie Lee is an associate in the Washington, D.C. office of Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher. She practices in the Litigation group with a focus on antitrust and competition, where she represents clients in high-stakes litigation matters, including at the trial stage.

Representative matters include:

- Member of the trial team representing Community Health Systems in FTC v. Novant Health (W.D.N.C.), which defeated the FTC's motion for a preliminary injunction.
- Represented the claimant, a financial services company, in an antitrust arbitration alleging conduct claims.
- Representing a medical equipment manufacturer in a competitor lawsuit alleging monopolization claims.
- Representing a pharmacy benefit manager in a proceeding before the FTC.

Connie also maintains an active pro bono practice and served as the lead attorney in winning a grant of asylum for a client in an immigration court hearing in 2022.

She received her Juris Doctor from Columbia Law School, where she was a Harlan Fiske Stone Scholar and served as a Note Editor on the Columbia Human Rights Law Review. She received her Bachelor of Arts degree from Dartmouth College in Government and Philosophy. During law school, Connie served as a judicial extern to the Honorable Raymond J. Lohier of the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Connie is admitted to practice law in the District of Columbia.
