San Francisco

Yana Nebuchina is an associate in Gibson Dunn's San Francisco office. Her practice focuses on complex commercial litigation and regulatory investigations, with a particular emphasis on intellectual property, cybersecurity, and data privacy.

Yana has helped secure favorable outcomes at every stage of litigation, from pre-trial dismissal to jury verdict. She has also guided clients through regulatory investigations by the DOJ, SEC, and state AGs. Yana maintains an active pro bono practice, representing local community members at trial in state court and advocating for domestic violence survivors in appellate court.

Yana earned her J.D., cum laude, from the University of Michigan in 2020. While in law school, she served as an editor of the Michigan Technology Law Review and as a Research Assistant to Professor Howard Bromberg. Yana earned her Bachelor of Arts degree in Biology from the College of Creative Studies at the University of California, Santa Barbara in 2013.
