James O'Donnell is a partner in the London office of Gibson Dunn and a member of the Investment Funds Practice Group. James advises both LP investors and sponsors on a range of high-profile capital-raising and transactional mandates in the funds space. His clients include market-leading funds of funds, sovereign wealth funds, banks, development finance institutions, pension plans, insurance companies and fund managers.

James has extensive experience of fund related transactions, including primary, GP and LP-led secondaries, co-investments, the establishment and operation of funds and carried interest vehicles, management spin-outs, managed accounts and joint ventures as well as fund restructurings.

He has a particular passion for impact and developmental investment and has regularly represented leading members of the international impact and DFI community (both individually and as syndicates) in respect of their investment activities, as well as developing their best practice procedures and model forms.

James' experience is truly global, including established markets such as North America and Europe, through to the Middle East, emerging markets including Africa and India and frontier markets including Somalia, Myanmar and Afghanistan.

James is an acknowledged market leader and ranked Band 1 for investor representation by Chambers & Partners since 2022. James is regularly invited to speak on fund-related matters, including being a lead contributor to the training and documentary programme of the Institution Limited Partners' Association (ILPA). He is also ranked by Chambers & Partners Africa for his work in the region.

James received a BA in History (Hons) from University of Durham.

Prior to joining Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher, James was co-chair of Investment Funds practice group at another U.S. law firm.
