

Kareem W. Ramadan

Associate Attorney

kramadan@gibsondunn.com

T: +1 202.887.3542

Washington, D.C.

Kareem Ramadan is a litigation associate in the Washington, D.C. office of Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher where he is a member of the Public Policy, Congressional Investigations, White Collar Defense and Investigations, and Antitrust practice groups.

Kareem has a wide range of experience advising clients on their interactions with Congress. He represents clients undergoing investigations by various congressional committees, including United States House and Senate Committees. The committees Kareem has worked with include House Education & Workforce, House Oversight and Accountability, House Financial Services, House Select Committee on the Strategic Competition between the United States and the Chinese Communist Party, House Select Committee to investigate the January 6th attack on the United States Capitol, House Judiciary, House Energy & Commerce, House Homeland Security, Senate Finance, Senate Homeland Security and Government Affairs, Senate Judiciary, Senate Budget, and Senate HELP. Kareem supports clients through all stages of investigations including subpoena responses and preparing witnesses for transcribed interviews and congressional hearings. He also provides counsel around federal ethics and lobbying rules.

Additionally, Kareem regularly supports companies through DOJ investigations, internal investigations, and internal risk assessments involving anti-corruption, securities fraud, false statements/obstruction, and the unlawful sale of regulated products.

Kareem earned his J.D. from the University of Virginia School of Law in 2020, where he received the Thomas Marshall Miller Prize and was a member of the Raven Society. During law school, he served as the Managing Editor for the Virginia Law Review, president of the Muslim Students Association, and president of the Middle East and North Africa Student Association. From 2020 to 2021, Kareem served as a law clerk to the Honorable Norman K. Moon in the United States District Court for the Western District of Virginia.

Prior to law school, Kareem worked in business development and strategy for a large IT government contractor in Northern Virginia. He received a B.S. in business administration and a second major in economics from the University of North Carolina in 2014.

Kareem is admitted to practice in the District of Columbia.

Publications

- Kareem W. Ramadan, Confessionalism in Lebanon: The Costs of Seeking Consensus Through Fragmentation, 61 Va. J. Int'l L. 137 (2020).