Ryan C. Stewart is a partner in the Washington, D.C. office of Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher. He is a member of the firm's Litigation Department and Labor & Employment Practice Group.

Ryan has represented clients in federal and state courts across the country at both the trial court and appellate levels, as well as in arbitration, agency, and administrative proceedings. He has experience representing employers in both single plaintiff and class action litigations across a wide range of labor and employment matters, including those involving federal and state wage-and-hour laws, Title VII and other federal and state discrimination laws, disability and accommodation laws, wrongful termination, whistleblower protection statutes, non-competition and non-solicitation agreements, unfair labor practices, immigration law and compliance, and executive employment disputes. Ryan also has experience representing clients in disputes involving high-profile personal tort offenses. He is an accomplished brief writer and has significant experience in trial proceedings, including direct examination of fact witnesses in a National Labor Relations Board proceeding.

In addition to his litigation experience, a substantial portion of his practice involves advising employers on an extensive variety of employment-related issues, including wage-and-hour compliance, joint employment status, independent contractor status, executive separations and related agreements, employee terminations, confidentiality and other employment-related contractual agreements, enforcement of restrictive covenants, employee handbooks and policies, including those related to sexual harassment complaints, affirmative action and other regulatory compliance, and sensitive workplace investigations. Ryan has advised employers regarding pay equity audits, analysis, and remediation efforts. He also has experience advising clients regarding interactions with the government, including the Department of Labor and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

Ryan was named a 2024 "Rising Star" in the Employment category by Law360, recognizing him as an attorney "whose legal accomplishments belie their age." Benchmark Litigation US also named him to its 2024 "40 & Under" list of "top emerging talent in litigation" and Lawdragon to its 2026 "500 Leading Corporate Employment Lawyers Guide."
