Eric J. Stock is a partner in the New York office of Gibson Dunn. Eric's practice focuses on antitrust litigation and investigations, especially for clients in the pharmaceutical, financial services, high tech, and health care industries. He is a member of Gibson Dunn's Antitrust and Competition and Litigation Practice Groups.

Eric is a leading antitrust litigator and one of the few attorneys to earn a Band 1 ranking in Antitrust for New York from Chambers USA. Clients describe him as "a phenomenal powerhouse," who is "a fantastic litigator," with "complete command of the law" (Chambers USA). Who's Who Legal referred to him as "an outstanding competition lawyer" who is "highly esteemed by peers," particularly in pharmaceutical matters. In 2022, 2024, and 2025, Eric was shortlisted for Life Sciences Antitrust Practitioner of the Year by LMG Life Sciences. Eric has also been recognized as a leading antitrust lawyer by Global Competition Review, The Best Lawyers in America®, Law360, Lawdragon, and Benchmark Litigation—underscoring his reputation as one of the foremost advocates in the field.

Eric's practice involves all aspects of antitrust enforcement, including civil litigation, government investigations, and merger clearance. He frequently is responsible for coordinating a client's response to antitrust investigations and civil litigation in multiple jurisdictions and proceedings. He has extensive experience litigating class actions and other civil antitrust cases in federal court, including defending clients accused of unlawful monopolization, collusion, and anticompetitive transactions. Eric has particular experience counseling and litigating matters where a client faces antitrust scrutiny as a result of its defense of its intellectual property rights. His litigation experience includes serving as the lead trial lawyer in a pharmaceutical monopolization case in the Southern District of New York, where his trial victory was upheld on appeal by the Second Circuit Court of Appeals.

Eric served for three years as Chief of the Antitrust Bureau at the New York Attorney General's Office ("NYAG"). In that role, he was responsible for overseeing the enforcement of New York State's antitrust laws and representing the interests of New York and its consumers in national antitrust matters. During Eric's tenure at NYAG, he served as lead counsel and lead trial attorney for New York in several noteworthy antitrust litigation matters and supervised dozens of antitrust investigations led by the state. He also had extensive experience partnering with the U.S. Department of Justice and Federal Trade Commission in joint federal and state investigations of proposed mergers or other business conduct. For example, he served as lead counsel for New York in the successful lawsuit brought by New York and the U.S. Department of Justice challenging an allegedly anticompetitive merger of Manhattan tour bus operators.

During his time at NYAG, Eric regularly worked with other state AG offices throughout the country on antitrust or related complex business litigation issues. In addition, in early 2016, he served as NYAG's Acting Executive Deputy Attorney General for Economic Justice, a position which supervises much of the office's business-related affirmative litigation,

Eric has recently achieved several important victories for his clients. In a class action brought by purchasers of Eurodollar futures against financial institutions accused of manipulating the LIBOR benchmark, Eric defeated class certification after deposing plaintiffs' lead economist, leading the briefing, and handling oral argument in both the District Court and Second Circuit. In an action brought against a major branded pharmaceutical company by a competitor alleging that the defendant unlawfully monopolized the market for dry eye medications through the use of bundled discounts, Eric won dismissal on the pleadings. Eric also won a motion to dismiss on behalf of a group of five major New York hospital systems that were accused by a competitor of colluding in violation of the antitrust laws.

Other examples of Eric's recent representations include:

Pharmaceuticals

- Representing major branded pharmaceutical companies in antitrust class actions alleging unlawful "reverse payment" patent settlements (ongoing).
- Representing a major biotech company in an antitrust action filed by a competitor alleging monopolization of the market for certain cholesterol reducing medications through the use of bundled discounts (ongoing).
- Assisting a branded pharmaceutical manufacturer in obtaining FTC clearance of several important acquisitions (clearance granted).

Financial Services

- Representing a major European financial institution in the defense of more than a dozen class actions filed in the S.D.N.Y. alleging manipulation of various interest rate and foreign exchange benchmarks (ongoing).
- Representing a major European financial institution in defending class actions filed in the S.D.N.Y. alleging manipulation of precious metals benchmarks (motion to dismiss granted).
- Representing a major seller of financial services solutions in a class action alleging antitrust violations in connection with the operation of the "CUSIP" system for identifying North American securities (ongoing).

High Tech and Health Care

- Represented major telecommunications company in a civil antitrust lawsuit brought against it by the Antitrust Division of the U.S. Department of Justice (resolved).
- Representing a major hospital system in Connecticut against accusations by a competing hospital system that it engaged in unlawful monopolization of the local market.
