Richard Surtees is a partner in the London office of Gibson Dunn and a member of the firm's Labour and Employment Practice Group.

Richard advises companies on employee share plans, incentive arrangements and remuneration matters, covering the full range of employee incentive schemes in both transactional and advisory contexts. His clients include late-stage growth companies, private equity firms, sovereign wealth funds and listed businesses.

He has significant experience supporting listed, private, and private equity-backed businesses on the design, implementation and ongoing operation of management and all-employee incentive arrangements, including the cross-border deployment of cash- and share-based plans in compliance with applicable legal, tax, and regulatory frameworks.

Richard regularly advises on the employee-incentive aspects of corporate transactions, including public takeovers, demergers, IPOs, private equity investments, private company M&A and restructurings.

He also advises on executive remuneration from a corporate governance and regulatory perspective, having assisted a number of major listed companies on the drafting of directors' remuneration policies, as well as the incentive aspects of executive appointments and terminations.

Richard has a particular focus advising financial services and insurance companies on the regulatory requirements of executive compensation, including compliance with financial regulatory remuneration codes, remuneration disclosures and reporting to regulatory authorities and applying malus and clawback to employee remuneration.

Richard is recognised in The Legal 500 UK 2026 for London – Employee Share Schemes (Employee Incentives).

Richard is a member of the Tax Committee of the Share Plan Lawyers Group.

Prior to joining Gibson Dunn, Richard was a partner at another international law firm.
