London

Hannah Watson Fanin is of counsel in the London office of Gibson Dunn and is a member of the firm's Investment Funds Practice Group. She advises a broad variety of institutional investors, including national and international development finance institutions, pension funds, sovereign wealth funds, funds of funds, and investment banks. Her clients invest into private funds covering a range of asset classes, including real estate, infrastructure, private equity and debt, in both developed and emerging markets.

Hannah's experience spans a variety of fund-related transactions, from fund formation, co-investments and secondary transactions, through to GP and LP-led restructurings, enforcement actions and advising on end-of-life issues. Prior to joining Gibson Dunn, Hannah worked at another major international law firm and in house at an institutional investor.
