Adam Whitehouse is a partner in the Houston office of Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher, where he advises clients on complex transactions across the energy sector. A member of the firm's Energy and Infrastructure, Oil and Gas, Data Centers and Digital Infrastructure, Cleantech, Power and Renewables, Mergers and Acquisitions, and Private Equity Practice Groups, Adam represents companies, investors, and project sponsors in strategic transactions that drive the evolving energy landscape.

Adam's practice spans the full spectrum of corporate and commercial matters, with a particular focus on mergers, acquisitions, divestitures, and joint ventures. He regularly counsels clients across the upstream, midstream, and energy transition value chains, combining technical understanding with practical business insight.

He has extensive experience with:

- Upstream oil and gas matters, ranging from purchase and sale agreements, drilling partnerships, joint development arrangements, farmout and participation agreements and other joint venture arrangements.
- Midstream commercial arrangements, including transportation, processing, interconnection, purchase, and NAESB agreements, as well as midstream joint ventures, acquisitions, and divestitures.
- Data center and digital infrastructure projects, such as gas procurement and transportation, development and construction agreements, and power purchase arrangements supporting high-efficiency, large-scale facilities.
- Tax credit transactions, including the acquisition and divestiture of renewable energy and clean technology credits.

Recognized for his leadership and excellence in the legal field, Adam has been listed in Best Lawyers: Ones to Watch in America™ (2023 and 2024 editions) for Corporate Law. He was selected for the 2025 Houston Energy Leadership Cohort and the 2022–2023 Leadership Class of the Institute for Energy Law, where he serves on the Advisory Board and as Vice Chair of the Young Energy Professionals organization. He is also active in the Association for International Energy Negotiators and the Houston Producers Forum.

Before joining Gibson Dunn, Adam practiced with a leading international law firm and served as counsel at Exxon Mobil Corporation, gaining invaluable in-house experience that enhances his commercial and strategic perspective.
