Shout-out to Jeffrey Wall and Morgan Ratner, part of a group that recently left Sullivan & Cromwell to join Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher. They represented the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and helped lead the briefing on behalf of petitioners challenging “digital discrimination” rules promulgated by Federal Communications Commission in the wake of the Infrastructure Investment and Jobs Act. This week, the Eighth Circuit unanimously vacated the rules, holding Congress did not authorize the agency’s adoption of "disparate impact" liability. Ratner argued for the petitioners seeking to vacate the rule.
