NYU Compliance & Enforcement

Partners M. Kendall Day and Jason Schwartz and associate Amalia Reiss authored NYU Compliance & Enforcement's "Executive Order on H-1B Program Is Latest Sign of Immigration Program Risks for Employers," which discusses the Trump administration directing greater scrutiny of applications submitted by U.S. companies seeking to sponsor foreign workers in highly skilled positions (commonly referred to as "H-1B visas"). "The recent announcements and enforcement actions confirm that H-1B petitions and PERM recruitment are now key parts of the Trump administration's focus on anti-U.S. worker employment discrimination," they write.
