Managing IP

Managing IP (subscription required) interviewed Jonathan Ashtor, who recently joined the firm as Co-Chair of the Technology Transactions Practice Group, about his hiring and the firm's launch of a multidisciplinary Robotics Industry Group. The moves are designed to meet growing client demand at the intersection of AI, hardware, and IP.

"Tech transactions have always been my bread and butter, and I was fortunate to do some early AI deals before it was big," he said. "While AI has always been a standout feature, my practice is broader than that, and that's why I found it so exciting to build on the different flavors of technology transactions at Gibson Dunn."
