The arrival of restructuring and liability management litigator Michael Schneidereit in New York has generated significant media attention from leading legal and industry publications, highlighting the firm's continued investment in its growing Business Restructuring and Reorganization Practice Group.

Global Restructuring Review (GRR) noted that Michael "represents lenders in high-stakes liability management exercises and distressed litigation" and has primarily counseled creditors in corporate restructurings and in-court bankruptcies. He told the publication he joined the firm because "Gibson is the market-leading creditor practice."

GRR also quoted Scott Greenberg, global chair of the firm's Business Restructuring and Reorganization Practice Group, on what Michael brings to clients: "With restructuring and liability management activity continuing to accelerate and mandates becoming increasingly litigious, clients will benefit from his ability to seamlessly integrate transactional sophistication with litigation firepower."

According to The Deal, Michael represented an ad hoc group of unsecured noteholders of Intelsat Jackson Holdings SA in Intelsat's 2020 Chapter 11 restructuring, which resulted in the group receiving about 96% of the equity of the reorganized company.
