Media Report Gibson Dunn ‘Continues Litigation Buildout’ With Arrival of Trial Lawyers Kimberly Branscome, Yahonnes Cleary, and Jonathan Tam

In the Media | September 25, 2026

The recent arrival of trial lawyers Kimberly Branscome, Yahonnes Cleary, and Jonathan Tam in Los Angeles and New York generated prominent media attention from leading legal and industry publications, highlighting the firm’s momentum in mass torts and product liability litigation.

Daily Journal reported that the firm “is continuing an aggressive expansion of its litigation ranks,” while Bloomberg Law described the team as “the latest high-profile additions to Gibson Dunn’s army of first chair litigators.” “We knew the firm and many of its lawyers well, and the chance to combine our trial experience with the depth of this litigation platform, including its exceptional appellate capabilities, was uniquely compelling,” Kimberly told the publication.

Law360 reported that the trio had “secured defense verdicts in some of the most high-profile product liability trials of the past decade.” Yahonnes told the publication: “The firm’s depth and strength in litigation, collaborative culture and overall track record of excellence made this a compelling opportunity.”

Additionally, The American Lawyer reported that Gibson Dunn “looks to take a leading role in major products liability cases,” describing the team’s arrival as “the latest in a series of high-profile litigation hires for Gibson Dunn.”
