Media Report Gibson Dunn Expands “Market-Leading Data Center Practice” With Arrival of Noah Hansford and Terrie Khoshbin

In the Media | September 23, 2026

The arrival of partner Noah Hansford and senior counsel Terrie Khoshbin in Gibson Dunn’s Dallas office drew coverage from leading legal and industry publications, with reports focusing on the firm’s expansion and its ability to serve clients across an increasingly complex digital infrastructure market.

Law360 reported that Gibson Dunn has “added depth to its data center practice.” Noah told the publication that the firm’s “preeminent platform is built to serve clients in every aspect of digital infrastructure development, investment, and operations.”

Noah also emphasized the reasons behind his move in Law360 Pulse: “This was a client-driven move. Gibson Dunn has done a fantastic job of assembling experts and A-level talent, and putting them all in the right places. I'm grateful to be part of it.”

Similarly, New York Real Estate Journal and Texas Lawyer noted that Noah and Terrie had already advised on “more than 350 matters worldwide this year.” Both publications quoted Terrie: “What attracted us to Gibson Dunn is its ability to assemble multidisciplinary teams that can help clients address those challenges and capitalize on new opportunities wherever they arise.”
