In an article for The Times on the proposals of the Financial Conduct Authority (FCA) to regulate crypto assets in the UK, partner Michelle Kirschner warns that, “while crypto regulation is to be welcomed, the FCA has a delicate balancing act to navigate between consumer protection and allowing the UK crypto sector to thrive and be competitive.” She adds: “Its leadership has publicly committed to a greater emphasis on competitiveness and innovation. Crypto regulation could prove an important testing ground for that sentiment.”
