Gibson Dunn today announced that leading trial lawyer and litigator Matthew Owen has joined the firm as a partner in its Litigation and Congressional Investigations Practice Groups in Washington, D.C. His practice spans complex commercial disputes, high-stakes investigations, and crisis management, with notable expertise in antitrust and drug pricing matters.

"Matt is a razor-sharp litigator who joins our elite team of lawyers operating at the intersection of complex litigation, governmental regulation, and public policy," said F. Joseph Warin, Chair of the nearly 300-lawyer Litigation Department of Gibson Dunn's Washington, D.C. office and Co-Chair of the firm's global White Collar Defense and Investigations Practice Group. "His proven trial capability brings the versatility and judgment clients need as they confront 'whole-of-government' exposure, with encyclopedic command of the pharmaceutical regulatory arena."

Matt, a double U.S. Supreme Court law clerk for Justices Gorsuch and Scalia, joins the firm's 47 former Supreme Court law clerks.

"Matt brings a rare combination of senior Senate investigative leadership and deep litigation experience," said Michael D. Bopp, Chair of the firm's Congressional Investigations Practice Group. "His experience will further enhance our ability to help clients navigate parallel litigation, regulatory, and congressional risks."

During his tenure in the U.S. Senate, Matt supervised the successful litigation of the Senate's first contempt action in more than twenty years and led a number of congressional investigations, including inquiries into competition in the cable and satellite television industry and drug pricing. He previously served as Chief Counsel of the Senate Judiciary Committee's Subcommittee on Antitrust, Competition Policy, and Consumer Rights, which oversees federal antitrust enforcement agencies and reviews major proposed mergers affecting the national economy.

"Gibson Dunn's litigation platform is the gold standard, and I am thrilled to begin the next chapter of my career working alongside mentors, colleagues, and friends," said Matt. "Today's bet-the-company matters are global, cross-practice, and move in real time, and it's clear the firm has built the leading platform to help clients navigate their most complex disputes and sensitive investigations."

Matt joins amid the continued strategic expansion of the firm's litigation bench, following the recent additions of former Acting Solicitor General Jeffrey Wall, Judson Littleton, and Morgan Ratner in Washington, D.C., as well as Yaira Dubin in New York.
