Partner Stephen Glover recently spoke to Financier Worldwide about the growing global phenomenon of shareholder activism and what companies can do to prepare. He emphasized that mobilizing a well-informed, transparent legal, financial, and public relations team is essential to managing the response. “The more time the adviser team has, and the more thorough its discussion with the company, the better the company’s defense will be.” Stephen added that more companies may find themselves in the crosshairs as activists increasingly target businesses in Europe and Asia, as well as in the U.S. “Although some industries, such as tech, media, and retail, have drawn more activist attention than others, no economic sector is safe from challenge.”
