

Ted Boutrous Discusses FBI Executing Search Warrant at Home of Washington Post Reporter with NPR

In the Media | January 16, 2026

NPR: Morning Edition

Partner Ted Boutrous spoke with NPR's "Morning Edition" about the FBI executing a search warrant at the home of a Washington Post reporter. Ted commented that the situation is of importance to all Americans: "That's why the First Amendment imposes these protections for journalists. It's not for the individual journalists. It's really for the American people so they can get the information they need to put a check on government abuses and to elect the people who they think will do the best job running the country."

Related People

Theodore J. Boutrous Jr.

Related Capabilities

First Amendment and Free Expression