GIBSON DUNN

Texas Lawbook Publishes “What Gov. Abbott’s Data Center Audit Directive Means for ERCOT and the Batch Zero Study Process” Client Alert

Article | August 26, 2026

The Gibson Dunn client alert “What Gov. Abbott’s Data Center Audit Directive Means for ERCOT and the Batch Zero Study Process” was re-printed in The Texas Lawbook. Partners Tory Lauterbach and Adam Whitehouse explain that the Public Utility Commission of Texas and Electric Reliability Council of Texas (ERCOT) must conduct a comprehensive verification and audit of all data centers moving through ERCOT’s interconnection process before any additional projects advance. They outline the primary requirements of the directive, as well as ERCOT’s proposed plan to accommodate the audit requirements, and analyze the key impacts on data centers currently seeking to interconnect to the ERCOT grid.

Of counsel Allison Hellreich and associates Carrie Mobley and Jess Rollinson contributed to the client alert.

Related People

Tory Lauterbach

Adam Whitehouse

Allison Hellreich

Carrie Mobley

Jess Rollinson

Related Capabilities

Energy Regulation and Litigation

Energy and Infrastructure

Data Centers and Digital Infrastructure

© 2026 Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher LLP. All rights reserved. For contact and other information, please visit us at www.gibsondunn.com. | www.gibsondunn.com