Partner Trey Cox was interviewed for the Law360 [PDF] article “AI Speeds Up Litigation Tasks but Not Overall Pace of Cases.” “It still takes a human being to stand in front of a jury or stand in front of a judge, and it still takes judgment to know what the right arguments are and what will be persuasive in your case,” he said. “AI can give you ideas, but ultimately the human being is the one who has to make those decisions.”
