

Webcast: Incentive Equity That Goes the Distance: Rethinking MIP Design for the Current Private Markets

Webcasts | May 20, 2026

Join us for a recorded 30-minute briefing on Incentive Equity That Goes the Distance: Rethinking MIP Design for the Current Private Markets. The program is part of a quarterly Executive Compensation and Employee Benefits webcast series designed to provide quick insights into emerging issues and practical advice. Topics discussed include how standard management incentive plans are showing their limits as longer hold periods become more common and continuation funds reshape the private markets landscape; designing MIPs that actually work when a traditional exit may not be on the horizon; vesting mechanics for extended hold periods, structuring around continuation fund transactions, and the legal pressure points GCs and fund counsel need to anticipate; and structuring incentive equity across some of the non-traditional liquidity scenarios defining today's private markets.
