Webcast: Proving the Case: Science, Patents, and Damages

Webcasts | November 19, 2026

This recording is the final part of a three-part CLE series following a single life sciences collaboration and licensing dispute across its full lifecycle to explore how contract language, forum selection, and science shape leverage, timing, proof, and outcomes. In this session our lawyers turn to proof, where science drives both liability and value. We address technical and patent evidence, expert strategy, and the milestone and diligence disputes that drive outcomes in these types of matters.

PANELISTS: Charlotte Jacobsen is a USPTO-qualified, first-chair litigator with advanced scientific degrees and a deep understanding of chemistry, biology and biotechnology. For 20 years, Charlotte has represented clients in complex chemical, pharmaceutical and biotechnology patent and licensing disputes. She has been lead trial counsel and won cases in the federal district courts, before the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit, and inter partes review proceedings before the Patent Trial and Appeal Board. She also has experience with arbitrations before the American Arbitration Association (AAA) and the International Chamber of Commerce (ICC), and with pre-litigation work having handled comprehensive preparatory investigations for numerous blockbuster products. Mary Beth Maloney is a first-chair trial lawyer for public companies, their boards, and senior executives in their highest-stakes federal and state court litigation, securities matters, government enforcement actions, and complex commercial disputes, with a particular focus on healthcare, life sciences, and financial services. She is regularly retained as lead trial counsel when public companies face existential threats—from regulators and watchdog organizations, in securities class actions and SEC enforcement matters, and in bet-the-company commercial disputes. © 2026 Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher LLP.
