

Webcast: Unlocking Value – The What, Why and How of Spin-Offs

Webcasts | May 1, 2024

Public companies have used spin-off transactions for many years to separate a business unit that is no longer a strategic fit with the businesses they wish to retain or when a business unit within the company's structure would receive a higher valuation as an independent company. Our presenters explain the basic structure of spin-off transactions and discuss the pros and cons as compared to other separation alternatives, including carve-out IPOs. They examine these issues from various legal perspectives, including corporate, tax and capital markets. The presenters also discuss strategies for avoiding and solving the problems that most frequently arise in spin-off transactions.
