THE 100 MOST INFLUENTIAL LAWYERS IN AMERICA

The National Law Journal has selected 100 lawyers who shape the legal world through their work in the courtroom, at the negotiating table, in the classroom or in government. They have taken on major legal battles and orchestrated the biggest corporate deals. They've tackled unpopular causes and helped run giant corporations.

The lawyers here were chosen by the NLJ's editors, aided by nominations from the legal community and research by our reporting staff. We asked several key questions to help judge the influence of lawyers profiled: How deep were their political connections?; what kind of results did they achieve for clients?; how far and how effective was their media reach?; have they been business leaders?; are they thought leaders on important legal issues? (Icons throughout this report indicating the qualities we feel the lawyers best embody.)

We limited selections in a few ways, focusing on accomplishments since 2006, the last time we published the 100 Most Influential Lawyers list. Judges weren't eligible, nor were members of Congress or the president. This list is for practicing attorneys, members of the legal academy and officials in law-centric government positions (elected or otherwise).

Our goal, in the end, was to identify members of law's power elite. Meet the 100 members in the pages that follow.

RANDY MASTRO

PARTNER, GIBSON, DUNN & CRUTCHER LLP, NEW YORK

Who's the most powerful lawyer in New York? Arguably, Randy Mastro. His ease in the courtroom, delivery of arguments and command of the law have made him one of the most in-demand attorneys in the country by big-name clients. Former chief of staff to New York Mayor Rudy Giuliani, Mastro, 56, lately has devoted much of his considerable energy to bedeviling Mayor Michael Bloomberg, most recently attacking a program that would let riders hail cabs using smartphones. The Rainforest Action Network takes Mastro seriously enough to denounce him as one of Chevron Corp.'s "Human Rights Hitmen." Also, he lectures at the University of Pennsylvania Law School.
