Decided Cases

1. Heien v. North Carolina*, No. 13-604 (N.C., 737 S.E.2d 351; cert. granted Apr. 21, 2014; SG as amicus, supporting respondent; argued on Oct. 6, 2014). Whether a police officer's mistake of law can provide the individualized suspicion that the Fourth Amendment requires to justify a traffic stop.

Decided Dec. 15, 2014 (574 U.S. __). N.C./Affirmed. Chief Justice Roberts for an 8-1 Court (Kagan, J. concurring, joined by Ginsburg, J.; Sotomayor, J., dissenting). The Court held that a police officer's reasonable mistake of law can provide the reasonable suspicion necessary to uphold a seizure under the Fourth Amendment. A North Carolina police officer stopped a car for driving with only one working brake light and discovered a bag of cocaine. But the North Carolina Court of Appeals determined that North Carolina law requires only one working brake light and suppressed the evidence. The North Carolina Supreme Court reversed, concluding that the officer's mistake of law was reasonable and thus justified the stop. The U.S. Supreme Court explained that the Fourth Amendment requires "reasonableness," not perfection, and noted that searches or seizures based on mistakes of fact can be reasonable. "Whether the facts turn out to be not what was thought, or the law turns out to be not what was thought, the result is the same: the facts are outside the scope of the law." So, the Court concluded, searches or seizures based on mistakes of law can also be reasonable. The Court clarified that a mistake of law must be objectively reasonable, and that the inquiry whether a mistake of law is reasonable is less "forgiving" under the Fourth Amendment than in the context of qualified immunity. The Court had "little difficulty" determining that the officer's incorrect interpretation of the state's brake light law, which the state appellate courts had not previously construed, was reasonable.

2014 • Finalist

Acclaimed as a litigation powerhouse, Gibson Dunn has a long record of outstanding successes. In awarding its 2014 Litigation Department of the Year Finalist honors, The American Lawyer noted our “cascade of litigation triumphs” and our wins of “seemingly unwinnable defense verdicts.” This award follows our unprecedented back-to-back wins as the 2010 and 2012 Litigation Department of the Year.

Partner Miguel A. Estrada was named a 2014 Litigator of the Year winner by The American Lawyer, and partner Theodore B. Olson was named a finalist in the publication’s inaugural 2012 Litigator of the Year competition.

The National Law Journal named Gibson Dunn to its 2014 Appellate Hot List, which recognized law firms demonstrating “outstanding achievements before the U.S. Supreme Court, federal circuit courts and state courts of last resort.”

Theodore Olson was named to The National Law Journal’s 2013 “100 Most Influential Lawyers in America,” recognizing “100 lawyers in the United States who have shaped the legal world through their work in the courtroom, at the negotiating table, in the classroom or in government.”

2. Dart Cherokee Basin v. Owens*, No. 13-719 (10th Cir., 730 F.3d 1234; cert. granted Apr. 7, 2014; argued on Oct. 7, 2014). Whether a defendant seeking removal to federal court under the Class Action Fairness Act is required to include evidence supporting federal jurisdiction in the notice of removal, or whether it is enough to allege the required “short and plain statement of the grounds for removal.”

Decided Dec. 15, 2014 (574 U.S. ___). Tenth Circuit/Vacated and remanded. Justice Ginsburg for a 5-4 Court (Scalia, J. dissenting, joined by Kennedy and Kagan, J.J., and joined in part by Thomas, J.; Thomas, J. dissenting). The Court held that a defendant seeking to remove a case under the Class Action Fairness Act of 2005 (“CAFA”) need include only a plausible allegation that the amount in controversy exceeds the jurisdictional threshold; the defendant need not include evidence supporting the amount in controversy. The Court also held that it had jurisdiction to review for abuse of discretion an appellate court’s refusal to review a district court’s remand order. Owens filed a putative class action in Kansas state court against Dart Cherokee Basin, and Dart removed the case. Dart’s notice of removal alleged that CAFA’s $5 million amount in controversy minimum was satisfied. The district court ordered that the case be remanded back to state court because, in its notice of removal, Dart had provided “no evidence” proving that the amount in controversy exceeded $5 million. Although CAFA permits a court of appeals to review remand orders, the Tenth Circuit denied Dart’s leave-to-appeal application without opinion. Reviewing for abuse of discretion, the Supreme Court concluded that the Tenth Circuit’s denial of review was based on an error of law. To remove a case from state to federal court, a defendant’s notice of removal must contain merely “a short and plain statement of the grounds for removal,” 28 U.S.C. § 1446(a), not proof of the amount in controversy. By stating that it was denying Dart’s application “[u]pon careful consideration of the parties’ submissions, as well as the applicable law,” the Tenth Circuit signaled that its decision embraced the district court’s erroneous requirement that CAFA removal notices contain evidence proving the amount in controversy. By relying on an error of law, the Court concluded, the Tenth Circuit abused its discretion in denying Dart’s application. The Court also explained that it has jurisdiction to review “[c]ases in the courts of appeals,” 28 U.S.C. § 1254, and the case was “in” the Tenth Circuit via Dart’s leave-to-appeal application.

3. Integrity Staffing Solutions v. Busk*, No. 13-433 (9th Cir., 713 F.3d 525; cert. granted Mar. 3, 2014; SG as amicus, supporting petitioner; argued on Oct. 8, 2014). Whether time spent in security screenings is compensable under the Fair Labor Standards Act (“FLSA”), as amended by the Portal-to-Portal Act.

Decided Dec. 9, 2014 (574 U.S. ___). Ninth Circuit/Reversed. Justice Thomas for a unanimous Court (Sotomayor, J., concurring, joined by Kagan, J.). The Court held that end-of-shift antitheft security screenings are postliminary activities under the FLSA and thus not compensable. The FLSA creates a minimum wage and requires overtime compensation for hours worked in excess of forty hours in a workweek. However, as noted by the Court, the FLSA fails to define “work” or “workweek.” Responding to the Court’s prior broad construction of those terms, Congress passed the Portal-to-Portal Act, which exempts from the FLSA “activities which are preliminary to or postliminary” to the “principal activity or activities” the employee is employed to perform. 29 U.S.C. § 254(a). The Court emphasized that its precedents have interpreted “principal activity or activities” to encompass “all activities which are an ‘integral and indispensable part of the principal activities.’” An activity is “integral and indispensable” if it forms “an intrinsic portion or element” of the employee’s principal activities. Applying these standards, the Court concluded that the security screenings were not the “principal activity or activities” the warehouse employees were employed to perform; rather, they were employed to retrieve products from shelves and package them for shipment. Nor were the screenings “integral and indispensable” to employees’ duties, as the elimination of the screenings would not have impaired their ability to perform those duties. The screenings, the Court concluded, were postliminary to the warehouse employees’ principal activities. The Court rejected the Ninth Circuit’s reasoning that the screenings were compensable because they were required by and performed for the benefit of the employer. That reasoning defies Congress’s intent in passing the Portal-to-Portal Act to narrow the FLSA’s application to the productive work the employee was employed to perform.

4. Warger v. Shauers*, No. 13-517 (8th Cir., 721 F.3d 606; cert. granted Mar. 3, 2014; SG as amicus, supporting respondent; argued on Oct. 8, 2014). Whether Federal Rule of Evidence 606(b) permits a party moving for a new trial based on juror dishonesty during voir dire to introduce juror testimony about statements made during deliberations that tend to show the alleged dishonesty.

Decided Dec. 9, 2014 (574 U.S. ____). Eighth Circuit/Affirmed. Justice Sotomayor for a unanimous Court. Federal Rule of Evidence 606(b) provides that “[d]uring an inquiry into the validity of a verdict,” testimony or other evidence “about any statement made or incident that occurred during the jury’s deliberations” is prohibited. The Court held that Rule 606(b) applies when a party seeks to establish that a juror was dishonest during voir dire by using another juror’s affidavit that reveals statements made during deliberations, and that this conclusion was dictated by the plain meaning of Rule 606(b). A motion for a new trial on the ground of juror dishonesty during voir dire unavoidably entails “an inquiry into the validity of a verdict,” because a dishonest response to a material question posed to a juror during voir dire permits the invalidation of the verdict under McDonough Power Equipment, Inc. v. Greenwood, 464 U.S. 548 (1984). The Court drew additional support from the common law rule on which Rule 606(b) is based. That common law rule—the “federal rule”—barred the introduction of jury deliberations as evidence even when used to establish juror dishonesty during voir dire. The Court pointed out that the language of Rule 606(b) reflects Congress’s adoption of the federal rule and rejection of the “Iowa rule,” which made deliberations admissible to challenge juror conduct during voir dire. The Court noted additionally that its leading pre-Rule 606(b) cases—McDonald v. Pless, 238 U.S. 264 (1915), and Clark v. United States, 289 U.S. 1 (1933)—adopted the federal rule, even though earlier cases expressed some approval for the Iowa rule. The Court also found unpersuasive the petitioner’s alternative argument that the juror affidavit in question fit into the Rule 606(b)(2)(A) exception, which permits the introduction of evidence of jury deliberations when offered to prove that “extraneous prejudicial information was improperly brought to the jury’s attention.” The prejudicial information in question—the offending juror’s generally negative view towards negligence liability based on a family member’s experience—was “internal” to that juror because it related to “the general body of experiences that jurors are understood to bring with them to the jury room.”

5. Public Employees’ Retirement System of Mississippi v. IndyMac MBS, Inc., No. 13-640 (2d Cir., 721 F.3d 95; cert. granted Mar. 10, 2014; argument scheduled for Oct. 6, 2014). Whether the filing of a putative class action serves, under American Pipe & Construction Co. v. Utah, 414 U.S. 538 (1974), to satisfy the three-year time limitation in Section 13 of the Securities Act, 15 U.S.C. § 77m, with respect to the claims of putative class members.

Decided Sept. 29, 2014 (573 U.S. ___). The writ of certiorari was dismissed as improvidently granted.

Whether the Arkansas Department of Correction’s grooming policy violates the Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act of 2000, 42 U.S.C. § 2000cc et seq., to the extent that it prohibits petitioner from growing a one-half-inch beard in accordance with his religious beliefs.
2. Kansas v. Nebraska and Colorado, No. 126, Orig. (Original Jurisdiction; noted June 9, 2014; argued on Oct. 14, 2014). 3. North Carolina Board of Dental Examiners v. FTC, No. 13-534 (4th Cir., 717 F.3d 359; cert. granted Mar. 3, 2014; argued on Oct. 14, 2014). Whether, for purposes of the state-action exemption from federal antitrust law, an official state regulatory board created by state law may properly be treated as a “private” actor simply because, pursuant to state law, a majority of the board’s members are also market participants who are elected to their official positions by other market participants.
4. Teva Pharmaceuticals USA, Inc. v. Sandoz, Inc., No. 13-854 (Fed. Cir., 723 F.3d 1363; cert. granted Mar. 31, 2014; SG as amicus, supporting neither party; argued on Oct. 15, 2014). Whether a district court’s factual finding in support of its construction of a patent claim term may be reviewed de novo, as the Federal Circuit requires (and as the panel explicitly did in this case), or only for clear error, as Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 52(a) requires.

5. Jennings v. Stephens*, No. 13-7211 (5th Cir., 537 F. App'x 326; cert. granted Mar. 24, 2014; argued on Oct. 15, 2014). Whether the Fifth Circuit erred in holding that a federal habeas petitioner who prevailed in the district court on an ineffective assistance of counsel claim must file a separate notice of appeal and motion for a certificate of appealability to raise an allegation of deficient performance that the district court rejected even though the Fifth Circuit acquired jurisdiction over the entire claim as a result of the respondent's appeal.
6. Omnicare, Inc. v. Laborers Dist. Council*, No. 13-435 (6th Cir., 719 F.3d 498; cert. granted Mar. 3, 2014; SG as amicus, supporting vacatur and remand; argued on Nov. 3, 2014). Whether, for purposes of a claim under Section 11 of the Securities Act of 1933, 15 U.S.C. § 77k, a plaintiff may plead that a statement of opinion was untrue merely by alleging that the opinion itself was objectively wrong, as the Sixth Circuit concluded, or whether a plaintiff must also allege that the statement was subjectively false—requiring allegations that the speaker's actual opinion was different from the one expressed—as the Second, Third, and Ninth Circuits have held.
7. Zivotofsky v. Kerry*, No. 13-628 (D.C. Cir., 725 F.3d 197; cert. granted Apr. 21, 2014; argued on Nov. 3, 2014). Whether a federal statute that directs the Secretary of State, on request, to record the birthplace of an American citizen born in Jerusalem as born in "Israel" on a Consular Report of Birth Abroad and on a United States passport is unconstitutional on the ground that the statute "impermissibly infringes on the President's exercise of the recognition power reposing exclusively in him."

9. Dep't of Homeland Security v. MacLean*, No. 13-894 (Fed. Cir., 714 F.3d 1301; cert. granted May 19, 2014; argued on Nov. 4, 2014). Whether certain statutory protections codified at 5 U.S.C. § 2301(b)(8)(A), which are inapplicable when an employee makes a disclosure "specifically prohibited by law," can bar an agency from taking an enforcement action against an employee who intentionally discloses Sensitive Security Information, based on regulations promulgated by the Transportation Security Administration.
10. Johnson v. United States*, No. 13-7120 (8th Cir., 526 F. App'x 708; cert. granted Apr. 21, 2014; argued on Nov. 5, 2014). Whether mere possession of

12. T-Mobile South v. Roswell, No. 13-975 (11th Cir., 731 F.3d 1213; cert. granted May 5, 2014; SG as amicus, supporting neither party; argued on Nov. 10, 2014). Whether a document from a state or local government stating that an application for a cell phone tower permit has been denied, but providing no reasons whatsoever for the denial, can satisfy the Communications Act’s “in writing” requirement, 47 U.S.C. § 332(c)(7)(B)(iii).
13. M&G Polymers USA v. Tackett, No. 13-1010 (6th Cir., 733 F.3d 489; cert. granted May 5, 2014; limited to Question 1; argued on Nov. 10, 2014). Whether, when construing collective bargaining agreements in Labor Management Relations Act (“LMRA”) cases, courts should presume that silence concerning the duration of retiree health-care benefits means the parties intended those benefits to vest (and therefore continue indefinitely), as the Sixth Circuit holds; or should require a clear statement that health-care benefits are intended to survive the termination of the collective bargaining agreement, as the Third Circuit holds; or should require at least some language in the agreement that can reasonably support an interpretation that health-care benefits should continue indefinitely, as the Second and Seventh Circuits hold.
14. Comptroller of Treasury of MD v. Wynne, No. 13-485 (Md., 431 Md. 147; CVSG Jan. 13, 2014; cert. opposed April 4, 2014; cert. granted May 27, 2014; SG as amicus, supporting petitioner; argued on Nov. 12, 2014). Alabama*, No. 13-1138; SG as amicus, supporting neither party; argued on Nov. 12, 2014). Whether Alabama’s legislative redistricting plans unconstitutionally classify black voters by race by intentionally packing them in districts designed to maintain supermajority percentages produced when 2010 census data are applied to the 2001 majority-black districts.

16. Elonis v. United States, No. 13-983 (3d Cir., 730 F.3d 321; cert. granted June 16, 2014; argued on Dec. 1, 2014). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether, consistent with the First Amendment and Virginia v. Black, 537 U.S. 343 (2003), conviction of threatening another person under 18 U.S.C. § 875(c) requires proof of the defendant’s subjective intent to threaten, as required by the Ninth Circuit and the supreme courts of Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Vermont; or whether it is enough to show that a “reasonable person” would regard the statement as threatening, as held by other federal courts of appeals and state courts of last resort. (2) Whether, as a matter of statutory interpretation, conviction of threatening another person under 18 U.S.C. § 875(c) requires proof of the defendant’s subjective intent to threaten.
17. Perez v. Mortgage Bankers Association, No. 13-1041 (D.C. Cir., 720 F.3d 966; cert. granted June 16, 2014; consolidated with Nickols v. Mortgage Bankers Association, No. 13-1052; argued on Dec. 1, 2014). Whether a federal agency must engage in notice-and-comment rulemaking pursuant to the Administrative Procedure Act before it can significantly alter an interpretive rule that articulates an interpretation of an agency regulation.
18. B&B Hardware, Inc. v. Hargis Industries, Inc., No. 13-352 (8th Cir., 716 F.3d 1020; CVSG Jan. 13, 2014; cert. supported May 23, 2014; cert. granted July 1, 2014; SG as amicus, supporting petitioner; argued on Dec. 2, 2014). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board’s finding of a likelihood of confusion precludes respondent from relitigating that issue in infringement litigation, in which likelihood of confusion is an element. (2) Whether, if issue preclusion does not apply, the district court was obliged to defer to the Board’s finding of a likelihood of confusion absent strong evidence to rebut it.
19. Whitfield v. United States, No. 13-9026 (4th Cir., 695 F.3d 288; cert. granted June 23, 2014; argued on Dec. 2, 2014). Whether 18 U.S.C. § 2113(e), which provides a minimum sentence of ten years in prison and a maximum sentence of life imprisonment for a bank robber who forces another person “to accompany him” during the robbery or while in flight, requires proof of more than de minimis movement of the victim.
20. Young v. United Parcel Service, Inc., No. 12-1226 (4th Cir., 707 F.3d 437; CVSG Oct. 7, 2013; cert. opposed May 19, 2014; cert. granted July 1, 2014; SG as amicus, supporting petitioner; argued on Dec. 3, 2014). Whether, and in what circumstances, the Pregnancy Discrimination Act, 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(k), requires an employer that provides work accommodations to nonpregnant employees with work limitations to provide work accommodations to pregnant employees who are “similar in their ability or inability to work.”
21. Hana Financial Inc. v. Hana Bank, No. 13-1211 (9th Cir., 735 F.3d 1158; cert. granted June 23, 2014; argued on Dec. 3, 2014). Whether trademark “tacking”—whereby an older trademark may be “tacked” to a newer one for purposes of determining trademark priority—is a question of fact for a jury or a question of law for a court.

22. Direct Marketing Ass’n v. Brohl, No. 13-1032 (10th Cir., 735 F.3d 904; cert. granted July 1, 2014; argued on Dec. 8, 2014). Whether the Tax Injunction Act, which provides that “[t]he district courts shall not enjoin, suspend or restrain the assessment, levy or collection of any tax under State law where a plain, speedy and efficient remedy may be had in the courts of such State,” bars federal court jurisdiction over a suit brought by non-taxpayers to enjoin the informational notice and reporting requirements of a state law that neither imposes a tax, nor requires the collection of a tax, but serves only as a secondary aspect of state tax administration.
23. Dep’t of Transportation v. Ass’n of Am. Railroads, No. 13-1080 (D.C. Cir., 721 F.3d 666; cert. granted June 23, 2014; argued on Dec. 8, 2014). Whether Section 207 of the Passenger Rail Investment and Improvement Act of 2008, which requires the Federal Railroad Administration (“FRA”) and Amtrak to “jointly . . . develop” the metrics and standards for Amtrak’s performance that will be used in part to determine whether the Surface Transportation Board (“STB”) will investigate a freight railroad for failing to provide the preference for Amtrak’s passenger trains that is required by federal law, is an unconstitutional delegation of legislative power to a private entity.
24. Gelboim v. Bank of America Corp., No. 13-1174 (2d Cir., No. 13-3565; cert. granted June 30, 2014; argued on Dec. 9, 2014). Whether and in what circumstances the dismissal of an action that has been consolidated with other suits is immediately appealable.
25. AL Dep’t of Revenue v. CSX Transp., Inc., No. 13-553 (11th Cir., 720 F.3d 863; CVSG Jan. 27, 2014; cert. opposed May 27, 2014; cert. granted July 1, 2014; SG as amicus, supporting neither party; argued on Dec. 9, 2014). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether a State “discriminates against a rail carrier” in violation of 49 U.S.C. § 11501(b)(4) when the State generally requires commercial and industrial businesses, including rail carriers, to pay a sales-and-use tax but grants exemptions from the tax to railroads’ competitors. (2) Whether, in resolving a claim of unlawful tax discrimination under 49 U.S.C. § 11501(b)(4), a court should consider other aspects of the State’s tax scheme rather than focusing solely on the challenged tax provision.
26. United States v. Wong, No. 13-1074 (9th Cir., 732 F.3d 1030; cert. granted June 30, 2014; argued on Dec. 10, 2014). Whether the six-month time bar for filing suit in federal court under the Federal Tort Claims Act, 28 U.S.C. § 2401(b), is subject to equitable tolling.
27. United States v. June, No. 13-1075 (9th Cir., 550 F. App’x 505; cert. granted June 30, 2014; argued on Dec. 10, 2014). Whether the two-year time limit for filing an administrative claim with the appropriate federal agency under the Federal Tort Claims Act, 28 U.S.C. § 2401(b), is subject to equitable tolling.

28. Reed v. Town of Gilbert, No. 13-502 (9th Cir., 587 F.3d 966; cert. granted July 1, 2014; SG as amicus, supporting petitioners; argument scheduled for Jan. 12, 2015). Whether the Town of Gilbert’s mere assertion that its sign code lacks a discriminatory motive renders its facially content-based sign code content-neutral and justifies the code’s differential treatment of petitioners’ religious signs.
29. Oneok, Inc. v. Learjet, Inc., No. 13-271 (9th Cir., 715 F.3d 716; CVSG Dec. 2, 2013; cert. opposed May 27, 2014; cert. granted July 1, 2014; SG as amicus, supporting petitioners; argument scheduled for Jan. 12, 2015). Whether the Natural Gas Act preempts state-law claims challenging industry practices that directly affect the wholesale natural gas market when those claims are asserted by litigants who purchased gas in retail transactions.
30. Mach Mining, LLC v. EEOC, No. 13-1019 (7th Cir., 738 F.3d 171; cert. granted June 30, 2014; argument scheduled for Jan. 13, 2015). Whether and to what extent a court may enforce the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission’s mandatory duty to conciliate discrimination claims before filing suit.
31. Kellogg Brown & Root v. United States, ex rel. Carter, No. 12-1497 (4th Cir., 710 F.3d 171; CVSG Oct. 7, 2013; cert. opposed May 27, 2014; cert. granted July 1, 2014; SG as amicus, supporting respondent; argument scheduled for Jan. 13, 2015). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether the Wartime Suspension of Limitations Act—a criminal code provision that tolls the statute of limitations for “any offense” involving fraud against the Government “[w]hen the United States is at war,” 18 U.S.C. § 3287, and which this Court has instructed must be “narrowly construed” in favor of repose—applies to claims of civil fraud brought by private relators, and is triggered without a formal declaration of war, in a manner that leads to indefinite tolling. (2) Whether, contrary to the conclusion of numerous courts, the False Claims Act’s so-called “first-to-file” bar, 31 U.S.C. § 3730(b)(5)—which creates a race to the courthouse to reward relators who promptly disclose fraud against the Government, while prohibiting repetitive, parasitic claims—functions as a “one-case-at-a-time” rule allowing an infinite series of duplicative claims so long as no prior claim is pending at the time of filing.
32. Mellouli v. Holder, No. 13-1034 (8th Cir., 719 F.3d 995; cert. granted June 30, 2014; argument scheduled for Jan. 14, 2015). Cases Determined Without Argument

1. Lopez v. Smith, No. 13-946 (9th Cir., 731 F.3d 859; Reversed and remanded Oct. 6, 2014). Per Curiam. The Ninth Circuit had affirmed the grant of a habeas petition in which a petitioner who was charged and convicted of first-degree murder alleged that he was denied his Sixth Amendment and due process rights to notice of the charges against him. At the time of charging, the State of California did not specify whether it was proceeding under a theory of principal liability or aiding-and-abetting, but at the close of evidence, the prosecution requested and received an aiding-and-abetting jury instruction. The jury subsequently convicted the petitioner of first-degree murder without specifying which theory of guilt it adopted. The Ninth Circuit held that the petitioner's Sixth Amendment and due process right to notice had been violated because the prosecution (until it requested the aiding-and-abetting jury instruction) had tried the case only on the theory of principal liability. In so holding, the Ninth Circuit relied on its own precedent to conclude that the constitutional principle at issue was "clearly established" for purposes of satisfying the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996 ("AEDPA"). The Court reversed the Ninth Circuit on the ground that it has "emphasized, time and again, that [AEDPA] prohibits the federal courts of appeals from relying on their own precedent in concluding that a particular constitutional principle is 'clearly established.'" The Ninth Circuit had cited three "older" Supreme Court cases, but these cases stood "for nothing more than the general proposition that a defendant must have adequate notice of the charges against him." This proposition, the Court held, was "far too abstract" to establish clearly the constitutional principle the petitioner needed to satisfy AEDPA, and so the Court reversed and remanded.
2. Johnson v. City of Shelby, No. 13-1318 (5th Cir., 743 F.3d 59; Reversed and remanded Nov. 10, 2014). Per Curiam. The Court held that a plaintiff seeking damages for a violation of his constitutional rights need not expressly invoke 42 U.S.C. § 1983 in his complaint in order to state a claim. Summarily reversing the Fifth Circuit's contrary judgment, the Court explained that the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure "do not countenance dismissal of a complaint for imperfect statement of the legal theory supporting the claim asserted." Nor do the Court's decisions in Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 554 (2007), and Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662 (2009), impose such a requirement, as those cases address the adequacy of a complaint's factual allegations, not its articulation of the legal theory underlying the claim.

3. Carroll v. Carman*, No. 14-212 (3d Cir., 749 F.3d 192; Reversed and remanded Nov. 10, 2014). Per Curiam. The Court held that Carroll—a law enforcement officer who conducted a “knock and talk” at a home by way of a publicly available entrance that was not the home’s front door—was entitled to qualified immunity from the homeowners’ claim that he violated their Fourth Amendment rights by entering their property without a warrant. The Third Circuit had held that it was clearly established that the “knock and talk” exception to the Fourth Amendment required an officer to begin the encounter at a residence’s front door. Reversing the Third Circuit’s judgment, the Court declined to decide “whether a police officer may conduct a ‘knock and talk’ at any entrance that is open to visitors rather than only the front door.” But the Court reasoned that, even assuming that controlling circuit precedent could constitute clearly established federal law in this case, no decision from the Third Circuit answered the question with sufficient certainty to deprive Carroll of qualified immunity. The Court also noted that other federal and state courts have rejected the rule the Third Circuit had held to be clearly established federal law.

4. Glebe v. Frost*, No. 14-95 (9th Cir., 757 F.3d 910; Reversed and remanded Nov. 17, 2014). Per Curiam. The Court held that the Ninth Circuit failed to comply with 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(1)’s requirement that a writ of habeas corpus be granted only if a state court’s decision “was contrary to, or involved an unreasonable application of, clearly established Federal law, as determined by the Supreme Court of the United States.” The state court in which Frost was convicted prevented Frost’s lawyer from contending in his closing argument both that the prosecution had failed to meet its burden of proof and that Frost had acted under duress. The Ninth Circuit, citing Herring v. New York, 422 U.S. 853 (1975), held that the state supreme court unreasonably applied clearly established federal law by failing to classify the restriction as a structural error. The Court reversed, reasoning that “even assuming that Herring established that complete denial of summation amounts to structural error, it did not clearly establish that the restriction of summation also amounts to structural error.” The Court also rejected the Ninth Circuit’s reliance on two of its own cases “to bridge the gap between Herring and this case.” Finally, the Court rejected the Ninth Circuit’s conclusion that the trial court’s restriction amounted to several other clearly established structural errors, as “[r]easonable minds could disagree whether requiring the defense to choose between alternative theories amounts to requiring the defense to concede guilt,” or “to eliminating the prosecution’s burden of proof, shifting the burden to the defendant, or directing a verdict.”
