May 20, 2013
Vol. 4, No. 5

GIBSON DUNN Supreme Court Round-Up

The Supreme Court Round-Up previews upcoming cases, recaps opinions, and tracks the actions of the Office of the Solicitor General. Each entry contains a description of the case as well as a substantive analysis of the Court's actions that is organized according to the Court's argument schedule.

October Term 2012

Decided Cases

1. Arlington, Texas v. FCC*, No. 11-1545; Cable, Telecommunications & Tech. v. FCC, No. 11-1547 (5th Cir., 668 F.3d 229; cert. granted Oct. 5, 2012 limited to Question One and cases consolidated; argued on Jan. 16, 2013). Whether a court should apply Chevron deference to review an agency's determination of its own statutory jurisdiction.

   Decided May 20, 2013 (569 U.S. __). Fifth Circuit/Affirmed. Justice Scalia for a 6-3 Court (Breyer, J., concurring in part; Roberts, C.J., dissenting, joined by Kennedy and Alito). The Court held that Chevron deference applies to review of an agency's determination of its own statutory jurisdiction. A detailed summary of this opinion will appear in the next edition of the Round-Up.

2. PPL Corp. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue*, No. 12-43 (3d Cir., 665 F.3d 60; cert. granted Oct. 29, 2012; argued on Feb. 20, 2013). Whether, in determining the creditability of a foreign tax, courts should employ a formalistic approach that looks solely at the form of the foreign tax statute and ignores how the tax actually operates, or should employ a substance-based approach that considers factors such as the practical operation and intended effect of the foreign tax.

   Decided May 20, 2013 (569 U.S. __). Third Circuit/Reversed. Justice Scalia for a 9-0 Court (Sotomayor, J., concurring). The Court held that the foreign tax at issue can be claimed as a foreign tax credit. A detailed summary of this opinion will appear in the next edition of the Round-Up.

3. Sebelius v. Cloer*, No. 12-236 (Fed. Cir., 675 F.3d 1358; cert. granted Nov. 20, 2012; argued on Mar. 19, 2013). Whether a person whose petition under the National Vaccine Injury Compensation Program is dismissed as untimely may recover from the United States an award of attorneys' fees and costs.

Theodore B. Olson
202.955.8500
tolson@gibsondunn.com

Amir C. Tayrani
202.887.3692
atayrani@gibsondunn.com

Porter Wilkinson
202.887.3709
pwilkinson@gibsondunn.com

Gibson Dunn was named the 2012 Litigation Department of the Year by The American Lawyer for an unprecedented second time. Appellate Group co-chair Ted Olson was named a finalist in the inaugural "Litigator of the Year" competition.

The National Law Journal named Gibson Dunn to its 2012 Appellate Hot List, which recognized law firms handling the "most exemplary, cutting-edge advocacy" in the country's appellate courts.

Ted Olson was named to The National Law Journal's 2013 list of the "100 Most Influential Lawyers in America," which recognizes "100 lawyers in the United States who have shaped the legal world through their work in the courtroom, at the negotiating table, in the classroom or in government."

Decided May 20, 2013 (569 U.S. __). Federal Circuit/Affirmed. Justice Sotomayor for a 9-0 Court (Scalia and Thomas, JJ., joined as to all but Part II-B). The Court held that an untimely National Vaccine Injury Compensation Program petition may qualify for an award of attorney's fees if it is filed in good faith and there is a reasonable basis for its claim. A detailed summary of this opinion will appear in the next edition of the Round-Up.

4. Metrish v. Lancaster*, No. 12-547 (6th Cir., 683 F.3d 740; cert. granted Jan. 18, 2013; argued on Apr. 24, 2013). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether the Michigan Supreme Court's recognition that a state statute abolished the long-maligned diminished-capacity defense was an "unexpected and indefensible" change in a common-law doctrine of criminal law under this Court's retroactivity habeas jurisprudence. (2) Whether the Michigan Court of Appeals' retroactive application of the Michigan Supreme Court's decision was "so lacking in justification that there was an error well understood and comprehended in existing law beyond any possibility for fairminded disagreement so as to justify habeas relief under Harrington v. Richter, 131 S. Ct. 770 (2011).

   Decided May 20, 2013 (569 U.S. __). Sixth Circuit/Reversed. Justice Ginsburg for a unanimous Court. The Court held that the Michigan Supreme Court did not unreasonably apply clearly established Federal law, and therefore the Sixth Circuit erred in granting habeas relief. A detailed summary of this opinion will appear in the next edition of the Round-Up.

5. Bowman v. Monsanto Co.*, No. 11-796 (Fed. Cir., 657 F.3d 1341; cert. granted Oct. 5, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting respondents; argued on Feb. 19, 2013). Patent exhaustion delimits rights of patent holders by eliminating the right to control or prohibit use of the invention after an authorized sale. In this case, the Federal Circuit refused to find exhaustion where a farmer used seeds purchased in an authorized sale for their natural and foreseeable purpose-namely, for planting. The Question Presented is: Whether the Federal Circuit erred by (1) refusing to find patent exhaustion in patented seeds even after an authorized sale and by (2) creating an exception to the doctrine of patent exhaustion for self-replicating technologies.

   Decided May 13, 2013 (569 U.S. __). Federal Circuit/Affirmed. Justice Kagan for a unanimous Court. The Court held that the doctrine of patent exhaustion does not permit a farmer who buys patented seeds to reproduce them through planting and harvesting without the patent holder's permission. Although the doctrine of patent exhaustion provides that "the initial authorized sale of a patented item terminates all patent rights to that item," Quanta Computer, Inc. v. LG Electronics, Inc., 553 U.S. 617, 625 (2008), the doctrine restricts the patentee's rights only as to the "particular article" sold, and thus "leaves untouched the patentee's ability to prevent a buyer from making new copies of the patented item." The doctrine of patent exhaustion therefore did not enable petitioner to make additional patented soybeans through planting and harvesting. The Court underscored that, "[w]ere the matter otherwise, Monsanto's patent would provide scant benefit," particularly as a "grower could multiply his initial purchase, and then multiply that new creation, ad infinitum—each time profiting from the patented seed without compensating the inventor." The Court was not persuaded by petitioner's arguments that the exhaustion doctrine should apply because seeds are meant to be planted and that interfering with this use creates an impermissible exception to the doctrine for patented seeds.

6. Bullock v. BankChampaign, N.A.*, No. 11-1518 (11th Cir., 670 F.3d 1160; cert. granted Oct. 29, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting respondent; argued on Mar. 18, 2013). What degree of misconduct by a trustee constitutes "defalcation" under § 523(a)(4) of the Bankruptcy Code that disqualifies the errant trustee's resulting debt from a bankruptcy discharge—and does it include actions that result in no loss of trust property.

   Decided May 13, 2013 (569 U.S. __). Eleventh Circuit/Vacated and remanded. Justice Breyer for a unanimous Court. The Bankruptcy Code, specifically 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(4), provides that an individual cannot obtain a discharge in bankruptcy of a debt "for fraud or defalcation while acting in a fiduciary capacity, embezzlement, or larceny." The Court held that the term "defalcation" includes a culpable state of mind requirement, and that a finding of "defalcation" requires immoral conduct, intentional wrong, or gross recklessness with regards to the improper nature of the fiduciary behavior complained of. The Court detailed five considerations which led it to interpret the term in this way: (1) statutory context (and the noscitur a sociis canon) favors this interpretation; (2) the interpretation does not render the word surplusage; (3) exceptions to discharge should be plainly expressed; (4) several circuit courts have interpreted the statute in this manner without difficulty; and (5) the Court was not presented with a compelling alternative. The Court also cited approvingly Neal v. Clark, 94 U.S. 704 (1878), in which it interpreted the term "fraud" in the Bankruptcy Code to contain a similar scienter requirement.

7. Dan's City Used Cars, Inc. v. Pelkey*, No. 12-52 (N.H., 163 N.H. 483; cert. granted Dec. 7, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting respondent; argued on Mar. 20, 2013). Whether state statutory, common law negligence, and consumer protection act enforcement actions against a tow-motor carrier based on state law regulating the sale and disposal of a towed vehicle are related to a transportation service provided by the carrier and are thus preempted by 49 U.S.C. § 14501-c-1.

   Decided May 13, 2013 (569 U.S. __). Sup. Ct. N.H./Affirmed. Justice Ginsburg for a unanimous Court. The Court held that the Federal Aviation Administration Authorization Act of 1994, which preempts all state laws "related to a price, route, or service of any motor carrier . . . with respect to the transportation of property," 49 U.S.C. § 14501(c)(1), does not preempt state-law claims stemming from the storage and disposal of a towed vehicle. Petitioner, a towing company, towed respondent's car, stored the car for several months, and then disposed of the car at a public auction in a manner respondent alleged was prohibited by the New Hampshire Consumer Protection Act and New Hampshire tort law. Respondent brought suit, and petitioner contended the respondent's claims were preempted by § 14501(c)(1). The Court disagreed and held that state-law claims stemming from the storage and disposal of a car, once towing has ended, are not sufficiently connected to a motor carrier's "service . . . with respect to the transportation of property" to warrant preemption under § 14501(c)(1). The Court so held for two reasons. First, respondent's claims did not concern "the transportation of property." They concerned the storage and disposal of property (his vehicle) after transportation had ended. Second, the claims were unrelated to the "service" of a "motor carrier." The only service petitioner rendered was its towing of respondent's car. That service ended months before the occurrence of the conduct on which respondent's claims were based (petitioner's disposal of his car). The Court emphasized that Congress's purpose in enacting § 14501(c)(1) was to ensure that state regulations did not impede the free transportation of interstate commerce and concluded that allowing respondent's claims to go forward was fully consonant with that purpose.

8. McBurney v. Young*, No. 12-17 (4th Cir., 667 F.3d 454; cert. granted Oct. 5, 2012; argued on Feb. 20, 2013). Under the Privileges and Immunities Clause of Article IV and the dormant Commerce Clause of the United States Constitution, whether a state may preclude citizens of other states from enjoying the same right of access to public records that the state affords its own citizens.

   Decided Apr. 29, 2013 (569 U.S. __). Fourth Circuit/Affirmed. Justice Alito for a 9-0 Court (Thomas, J., concurring). The Court held that Virginia's Freedom of Information Act ("FOIA") does not violate the Privileges and Immunities Clause of the U.S. Constitution because the Commonwealth made available by other means most of the information petitioners sought, and refusal to release the remaining information did not abridge any of petitioners' fundamental privileges and immunities. The Court also held that the Virginia FOIA does not violate the dormant Commerce Clause because it does not prohibit or unduly regulate any interstate market. Virginia's FOIA provides that "all public records shall be open to inspection and copying by any citizens of the Commonwealth," but does not grant the same right to non-citizens. § 2.2-3704(A). Petitioners, non-Virginia citizens, sought declaratory and injunctive relief under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for violations of the Privileges and Immunities Clause and the dormant Commerce Clause. Noting that the Privileges and Immunities Clause protects only "fundamental" privileges and immunities, the Court held that the Clause does not include the "broad right" of "access to public information on equal terms with citizens of the Commonwealth." Although petitioners' remaining arguments—the ability to earn a living in one's chosen profession, the right to own and transfer property, and the right to resort to a state's courts on equal terms with state citizens—did come within the ambit of the Clause, the Court rejected these arguments because Virginia's FOIA was not enacted with a protectionism aim, and most of the information petitioners sought was available through alternate means. Finally, the Court explained that the Dormant Commerce Clause is not violated in this case because Virginia's FOIA does not "interfere[] with an interstate market through prohibition or burdensome regulations," but "merely provides a service to local citizens that would not otherwise be available at all."

9. Boyer v. Louisiana*, No. 11-9953 (La. Ct. App., 56 So.3d 1119; cert. granted Oct. 5, 2012 limited to Question One; argued on Jan. 14, 2013). Whether a state's failure to fund counsel for an indigent defendant for five years, particularly where failure was the direct result of the prosecution's choice to seek the death penalty, should be weighed against the state for speedy trial purposes.

   Decided April 29, 2013 (569 U.S. __). The writ of certiorari was dismissed as improvidently granted.

10. Moncrieffe v. Holder*, No. 11-702 (5th Cir., 662 F.3d 387; cert. granted Apr. 2, 2012; argued on Oct. 10, 2012). Whether a conviction under a provision of state law that encompasses, but is not limited to, the distribution of a small amount of marijuana without remuneration constitutes an aggravated felony, notwithstanding that the record of conviction does not establish that the alien was convicted of conduct that would constitute a federal felony.

    Decided Apr. 23, 2013 (569 U.S. __). Fifth Circuit/Reversed and remanded. Justice Sotomayor for a 7-2 Court (Alito, J., dissenting; Thomas, J., dissenting). The Court held that if a noncitizen's conviction for a marijuana distribution offense fails to establish that the offense involved either remuneration or more than a small amount of marijuana, it is not an aggravated felony under the Immigration and Nationality Act ("INA"). Under the INA, a noncitizen convicted of an "aggravated felony" is not only deportable, 8 U. S. C. § 1227(a)(2)(A)(iii), but also ineligible for discretionary relief. The INA lists as an "aggravated felony" "illicit trafficking in a controlled substance," § 1101(a)(43)(B), which – though undefined – includes conviction of an offense that the Controlled Substances Act (CSA) makes punishable by more than one year's imprisonment, see 18 U.S.C. §§ 924(c)(2), 3559(a)(5). For purposes of the INA, a conviction under state law "constitutes a 'felony punishable under the [CSA]' only if it proscribes conduct punishable as a felony under that federal law." Lopez v. Gonzales, 549 U. S. 47, 60 (2006). Here, the defendant pleaded guilty under Georgia law to possession of marijuana with intent to distribute. The government sought to deport him on the ground that his conviction was an aggravated felony under the CSA, punishable by up to five years' imprisonment. 21 U.S.C. § 841(b)(1)(D). After the defendant was ordered deported in administrative proceedings, and the Fifth Circuit denied his petition for review, the Court granted certiorari. The Court began by observing that it was required to apply the "categorical approach" to determine whether the defendant's state law conviction qualified as a felony for purposes of the INA. Under the "categorical approach," courts look "not to the facts of the particular prior case," but instead to whether "the state statute defining the crime of conviction" categorically fits within the "generic" federal definition (meaning the offense when viewed in the abstract) of a corresponding aggravated felony. Gonzales v. Duenas-Alvarez, 549 U. S. 183, 186 (2007) (citing Taylor v. United States, 495 U. S. 575, 599–600 (1990)). Though federal law generally treats marijuana possession as a felony, it is characterized as a misdemeanor if the conviction involves a small amount of the drug and no money changed hands. Because the Georgia statute under which the defendant was convicted for possession with intent to distribute did not reveal whether either remuneration or more than a small amount of marijuana was involved, the defendant's conviction could correspond to either the CSA felony or the CSA misdemeanor. Accordingly, the defendant was not convicted of an aggravated felony and could not be subject to deportation under the INA. In reaching this conclusion, the Court observed that it would consider both the elements of a crime and sentencing factors in applying the categorical approach; that is, the state offense conviction must meet both the elements of the generic federal offense defined by the INA, and the CSA must punish that offense as a felony.

Gibson Dunn – Counsel for Amicus Curiae Mothers Against Drunk Driving

11. Missouri v. McNeely*, No. 11-1425 (Supreme Court of Missouri, 358 S.W.3d 65; cert. granted Sept. 25, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting petitioner; argued on Jan. 9, 2013). Whether a law enforcement officer may obtain a nonconsensual and warrantless blood sample from a drunk driver under the exigent circumstances exception to the Fourth Amendment warrant requirement based upon the natural dissipation of alcohol in the bloodstream.

    Decided Apr. 17, 2013 (569 U.S. __). Sup. Ct. of Mo./Affirmed. Justice Sotomayor for a 5-4 Court (Kennedy, J., concurring in part; Roberts, C.J., concurring and dissenting in part, joined by Breyer and Alito, JJ.; Thomas, J., dissenting). The Court held that in drunk-driving investigations, the natural metabolization of alcohol in the bloodstream does not constitute a per se exigency sufficient to justify an exception to the Fourth Amendment's warrant requirement for nonconsensual blood testing in all drunk-driving cases. Here, the defendant was stopped for driving under the influence and subjected to a non-consensual blood test. At trial for drunk driving, he sought to suppress the admission of the blood test on the ground that it was conducted in violation of the Fourth Amendment. The trial and appellate courts agreed, and the Court granted certiorari to resolve a split in authority on the question whether the natural dissipation of alcohol in the bloodstream establishes a per se exigency that suffices on its own to justify an exception to the warrant requirement for nonconsensual blood testing in drunk-driving investigations. The Court began its analysis by observing that the general principle that a warrantless search of a person is reasonable only if it falls within a recognized exception applied in this case. The State claimed that the search was per se permissible under the exigency exception, which provides for a warrantless search when "the exigencies of the situation make the needs of law enforcement so compelling that a warrantless search is objectively reasonable under the Fourth Amendment." Kentucky v. King, 563 U. S. ___, ___ (2011) (slip op., at 6) (internal quotation marks and brackets omitted). The Court disagreed, holding that, consistent with general Fourth Amendment principles, the exigency must be determined case by case based on the totality of the circumstances. The Court's decision in Schmerber v. California, 384 U.S. 757 (1966), in which the Court upheld the warrantless blood test of an individual arrested for driving under the influence, was not to the contrary because, there, the Court made clear that its judgment that the exigency exception applied based "on the facts of the present record." Id. at 772.

12. Kiobel v. Royal Dutch Petroleum*, No. 10-1491 (2d Cir., 621 F.3d 111; cert. granted Oct. 17, 2011, argued in tandem with Mohamad v. Rajoub, No. 11-88; SG as amicus, supporting petitioners; argued on Feb. 28, 2012; restored to calendar on Mar. 5, 2012; SG supplemental brief as amicus, supporting petitioners; argued on Oct. 1, 2012). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether the issue of corporate civil tort liability under the Alien Tort Statute ("ATS"), 28 U.S.C. § 1350, is a merits question or an issue of subject matter jurisdiction. (2) Whether corporations are immune from tort liability for violations of the law of nations such as torture, extrajudicial executions or genocide or whether they may be sued in the same manner as any other private party defendant under the ATS. (3) Whether and under what circumstances the ATS allows courts to recognize a cause of action for violations of the law of nations occurring within the territory of a sovereign other than the United States.

    Decided Apr. 17, 2013 (569 U.S. __). Second Circuit/Affirmed. Chief Justice Roberts for a 9-0 Court (Kennedy, J., concurring; Alito, J., concurring, joined by Thomas, J.; Breyer, J., concurring, joined by Ginsburg, Sotomayor, and Kagan, JJ.). The Court held that the presumption against the extraterritorial application of U.S. law applies to claims under the Alien Tort Statute ("ATS"), 28 U.S.C. § 1350, and nothing in the text, history, or purposes of the statute rebuts that presumption. Petitioners were Nigerian nationals residing in the United States who filed suit under the ATS, alleging that certain Dutch, British, and Nigerian corporations aided and abetted the Nigerian Government in committing violations of the law of nations in Nigeria. The ATS, which is a jurisdictional statute, provides that "[t]he district courts shall have original jurisdiction of any civil action by an alien for a tort only, committed in violation of the law of nations or a treaty of the United States." 28 U. S. C. § 1350. The Court has previously construed the ATS to permit federal courts to "recognize private claims [for a modest number of international law violations] under federal common law." Sosa v. Alvarez-Machain, 542 U. S. 692, 732 (2004). This case presented the separate question whether the ATS could be invoked to reach conduct occurring in the territory of a foreign sovereign. In conducting this inquiry, the Court determined that the ATS must be understood within the context of the presumption against extraterritoriality, which "serves to protect against unintended clashes between our laws and those of other nations which could result in international discord." EEOC v. Arabian American Oil Co., 499 U. S. 244, 248 (1991). Though the presumption is typically applied to determine whether an Act of Congress regulating conduct applies abroad, the Court determined that its underlying principles similarly constrain courts when considering causes of action that may be brought under the ATS, particularly as the ATS's extraterritorial application raises the prospect of unwarranted judicial interference in the conduct of foreign policy. Moreover, the presumption was not rebutted by the text, history, or purpose of the ATS. The text of the ATS failed to evince a clear indication of extraterritoriality. That the statutory text referred to violations of "the law of nations" did not mean that it was intended to apply extraterritorially because such violations could happen within or outside the United States. Likewise, the history of the ATS's enactment failed to rebut the presumption against extraterritoriality because when the ATS was passed, the only recognized violations of the law of nations were violation of safe conducts, infringements of the rights of ambassadors, and piracy, none of which provided support for the proposition that Congress expected causes of action to be brought under the statute for violations of the law of nations occurring abroad. Finally, there was no indication that the ATS was passed to "make the United States a uniquely hospitable forum for the enforcement of international norms."

13. Genesis Healthcare Corp. v. Symczyk*, No. 11-1059 (3d Cir., 656 F.3d 189; cert. granted June 25, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting affirmance; argued on Dec. 3, 2012). Whether a case becomes moot, and thus beyond the judicial power of Article III, when the lone plaintiff receives an offer from the defendants to satisfy all of the plaintiff's claims.

    Decided Apr. 16, 2013 (569 U.S. __). Third Circuit/Reversed. Justice Thomas for a 5-4 Court (Kagan, J., dissenting, joined by Ginsburg, Breyer, and Sotomayor, JJ.). The Court held that an action under the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 ("FLSA"), 29 U.S.C. § 216(b), brought by a single plaintiff on behalf of herself and "other similarly situated" employees, was no longer justiciable when the lone plaintiff's individual claim became moot. The respondent brought the FLSA claim on behalf of herself and others who were similarly situated, but after she ignored an offer of judgment under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 68 that would have fully satisfied her claim, and no other individuals had joined her suit, the district court concluded that her suit was moot. The Third Circuit reversed, holding that her individual claim was moot but that her collective action was not. The Supreme Court agreed with the district court, holding that "[a] straightforward application of well-settled mootness principles" compelled the conclusion that because the Respondent had no personal interest in representing putative, unnamed claimants, nor any other continuing interest that would preserve her suit from mootness, her suit was appropriately dismissed for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction. "[T]he mere presence of collective-action allegations in the complaint cannot save [a] suit from mootness once the individual claim has been satisfied."

14. US Airways, Inc. v. McCutchen*, No. 11-1285 (3d Cir., 663 F.3d 671; cert. granted June 25, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting neither party; argued on Nov. 27, 2012). Whether the Third Circuit correctly held—in conflict with the Fifth, Seventh, Eighth, Eleventh, and D.C. Circuits—that Section 502(a)(3) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act authorizes courts to use equitable principles to rewrite contractual language and refuse to order participants to reimburse their plan for benefits paid, even where the plan's terms give it an absolute right to full reimbursement.

    Decided Apr. 16, 2013 (569 U.S. __). Third Circuit/Vacated and remanded. Justice Kagan for a 5-4 Court (Scalia, J., dissenting, joined by Roberts, C.J., and Thomas and Alito, JJ.). The Court held that the express terms of the plan govern in an action brought under Section 502(a)(3) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act ("ERISA"), which authorizes a civil action "to obtain . . . appropriate equitable relief . . . to enforce . . . the terms of the" ERISA plan, based on an equitable lien by agreement. The Court observed that neither general unjust enrichment principles nor specific doctrines reflecting those principles—such as the double-recovery or common-fund rules—can override the express terms of the contract. (Under the common fund rule, a litigant or lawyer who recovers a common fund for the benefit of persons other than himself or his client is entitled to a reasonable attorney's fee from the fund as a whole.) Though the respondent cited a slew of cases in which courts applied equitable doctrines, none did so to override a clear contract that provided otherwise. The Court reasoned that this result comports with ERISA's focus on what a plan provides: § 502(a)(3) does not "authorize 'appropriate equitable relief' at large," Mertens v. Hewitt Associates, 508 U. S. 248, 253 (1993), but countenances only such relief as will enforce "the terms of the plan" or the statute. When there are gaps in the relevant ERISA plan, however, equitable doctrines may be used to properly construe it. Because the plan at issue was silent on the allocation of attorney's fees, the common fund doctrine could be used to fill the gap. The Court reasoned that ordinary contract interpretation principles supported this conclusion because courts construe ERISA plans, as they do other contracts, by "looking to the terms of the plan" as well as to "other manifestations of the parties' intent." Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. v. Bruch, 489 U. S. 101, 113. Where the terms of a plan leave gaps, courts must "look outside the plan's written language" to decide the agreement's meaning, CIGNA Corp. v. Amara, 563 U. S. ___, ___, and should properly take account of the doctrines that typically or traditionally have governed a given situation when no agreement states otherwise.

Gibson Dunn – Counsel for Comcast Corp.

15. Comcast Corp. v. Behrend*, No. 11-864 (3d Cir., 655 F.3d 182; cert. granted June 25, 2012; argued on Nov. 5, 2012). Whether a district court may certify a class action without resolving whether the plaintiff class has introduced admissible evidence, including expert testimony, to show that the case is susceptible to awarding damages on a class-wide basis.

Decided Mar. 27, 2013 (568 U.S. __). Third Circuit/Reversed. Justice Scalia for a 5-4 Court (Ginsburg and Breyer, JJ., dissenting, joined by Sotomayor and Kagan, JJ.). The Court held that a class of Comcast subscribers was improperly certified under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(b)(3) because the class's damages model failed to establish that damages could be calculated on a class-wide basis. A putative class of Comcast cable television subscribers sued Comcast and its subsidiaries, alleging that the practice of "clustering" operations violates federal antitrust laws. "Clustering" is a strategy of concentrating operations in a region by swapping systems outside the region for competitor systems inside the region. The class claimed that it was harmed by Comcast's "clustering" strategy because it lessened competition and created supra-competitive prices. The class sought certification under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(b)(3), which permits certification only if "the court finds that the questions of law or fact predominate over any questions affecting only individual members." The district court required the class to show that (1) the "antitrust impact" of the violation could be proved at trial through evidence common to the class, and (2) the damages were measurable on a class-wide basis through a "common methodology." The district court accepted only one of the class's four proposed theories of antitrust impact: that Comcast's actions lessened competition from "overbuilders," i.e., companies that build competing networks in areas where an incumbent cable company already operates. It then certified the class, finding that the damages from overbuilder deterrence could be calculated on a class-wide basis. The Third Circuit affirmed. The Supreme Court reversed, holding that the Third Circuit erred "[b]y refusing to entertain arguments against the [class's] damages model that bore on the propriety of class certification under Rule 23, simply because those arguments would also be pertinent to the merits determination." Specifically, the Third Circuit failed to evaluate the damages model to determine whether the damages it projected were tied to the single theory of liability approved by the district court. Because the model failed to measure damages resulting from the particular antitrust injury on which Comcast's liability was premised, it failed to demonstrate that damages could be calculated on a national basis. Accordingly, the class was improperly certified.

16. Millbrook v. United States*, No. 11-10362 (3d Cir., 2012 WL 1384918; cert. granted Sept. 25, 2012; argued on Feb. 19, 2013). Whether 28 U.S.C. §§ 1346(b) and 2680(h) waive the sovereign immunity of the United States for the intentional torts of prison guards when they are acting within the scope of their employment but are not exercising authority to "execute searches, to seize evidence, or to make arrests for violations of federal law."

    Decided Mar. 27, 2013 (568 U.S. __). Third Circuit/Reversed and remanded. Justice Thomas for a unanimous Court. Section 2680(h) of the Federal Tort Claims Act ("FTCA") is known as the "law enforcement proviso" and extends the FTCA's waiver of sovereign immunity to claims for six intentional torts that are based on the "acts or omissions" of an "investigative or law enforcement officer." 28 U.S.C. § 2680(h). The Court held that Section 2680(h)'s waiver of immunity for the six intentional torts applies to all of the activities of law enforcement officers within the scope of their employment, regardless of whether the officers are engaged in investigative or law enforcement activity, or are executing a search, seizing evidence, or making an arrest. Petitioner Millbrook, a federal prisoner, sued the United States under the FTCA, alleging, inter alia, assault and battery by correctional officers. The district court and the Third Circuit granted summary judgment to the Government, holding that the "law enforcement proviso" applies only to tortious conduct that occurs during the course of executing a search, seizing evidence, or making an arrest. The Supreme Court disagreed. Relying on Section 2680(h)'s plain language and its cross-reference to Section 1346(b) of the FTCA, the Court observed that the law enforcement proviso waived immunity for six intentional torts resulting from the "acts or omissions" of an "investigative or law enforcement officer" that occur while the officer is "acting within the scope of his employment." Nothing in Section 2680(h)'s text, the Court reasoned, supported limiting the proviso to conduct arising out of searches, seizures of evidence, or arrests. Indeed, the FTCA's only reference to those terms was in Section 2680(h)'s definition of "investigative or law enforcement officer," which the Court understood to refer to the status of persons whose conduct might be actionable, not the types of activities that may give rise to the claim.

17. Florida v. Jardines*, No. 11-564 (Fl., 73 So. 3d 34; cert. granted Jan. 6, 2012, limited to Question 1; SG as amicus, supporting petitioner; argued on Oct. 31, 2012). Whether a dog sniff at the front door of a suspected grow house by a trained narcotics detection dog is a Fourth Amendment search requiring probable cause.

    Decided Mar. 26, 2013 (568 U.S. __). Florida Supreme Court/Affirmed. Justice Scalia for a 5-4 Court (Kagan, J., concurring, joined by Ginsburg and Sotomayor, JJ.; Alito, J., dissenting, joined by Roberts, C.J. and Kennedy and Breyer, JJ.). The Court held that the use of a drug-sniffing dog to investigate a home and its surroundings is a "search" within the meaning of the Fourth Amendment. In 2006, police took a drug-sniffing dog to Joelis Jardines's front porch, where the dog gave a positive alert for narcotics. Based on the alert, the officers sought and obtained a search warrant, which revealed marijuana plants. At Jardines's trial for trafficking in cannabis, the trial court suppressed the marijuana plant evidence on the ground that the canine investigation was an unreasonable search in violation of the Fourth Amendment. The Supreme Court of Florida affirmed, and the Supreme Court agreed. The Court observed that a "search" within the meaning of the Fourth Amendment occurs when the Government obtains information by physically intruding on persons, houses, papers, or effects. The Court further noted that when it comes to the Fourth Amendment, "the home is first among equals" and that the "home" includes "curtilage," or the area immediately surrounding and associated with the home. Because Jardines had not expressly or implicitly invited the police to engage in a canine forensic investigation on his front porch, the police had no license to conduct their investigation and violated the Fourth Amendment. Because the Court found that the search violated the Fourth Amendment, it declined to reach the question whether the officers investigation of Jardines's home violated his expectation of privacy under Katz v. United States, 389 U.S. 347 (1967).

18. Decker v. Northwest Envtl. Defense Ctr.*, No. 11-338, Georgia-Pacific West v. Northwest Envtl. Defense Ctr., No. 11-347 (9th Cir., 640 F.3d 1063; cert. granted June 25, 2012, cases consolidated; SG as amicus, supporting petitioners; argued on Dec. 3, 2012). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether the Ninth Circuit erred when, in conflict with other circuits, it held that a citizen may bypass judicial review of a National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System ("NPDES") permitting rule under 33 U.S.C. § 1369, and may instead challenge the validity of the rule in a citizen suit to enforce the Clean Water Act ("CWA"). (2) Whether the Ninth Circuit erred when it held that stormwater from logging roads is industrial stormwater under the CWA and EPA's rules, even though EPA has determined that it is not industrial stormwater.

    Decided Mar. 20, 2013 (568 U.S. __). Ninth Circuit/Reversed and remanded. Justice Kennedy for a 7-1 Court (Roberts, C.J., concurring in part, joined by Alito, J.; Scalia, J., dissenting in part and concurring in part). The Court held that the Environmental Protection Agency's interpretation of its Industrial Stormwater Rule—a regulation implementing the Clean Water Act that EPA has since amended—was reasonable and must be accorded deference under Auer v. Robbins, 519 U.S. 452 (1997). At issue was whether the EPA had reasonably determined that, under its rule, a permit is not required "before channeled stormwater runoff from logging roads can be discharged into the navigable waters of the United States." Reiterating the "well established" rule "that an agency's interpretation need not be the only possible reading of a regulation—or even the best one—to prevail," the Court held that the EPA's interpretation of the Industrial Stormwater Rule was a permissible one, both because the regulation's language "leave[s] open the rational interpretation" reached by the EPA, and because "there is no indication that [EPA's] current view is a change from prior practice or a post hoc justification adopted in response to litigation." Additionally, the Court concluded that even though the EPA had since amended its Rule, the case nonetheless presented "a live controversy … regarding whether petitioners may be held liable for unlawful discharges under the earlier version of the Industrial Stormwater Rule." And the Court determined that because the case was a "citizen suit" designed "not to challenge [a regulation] but to enforce it under a proper interpretation," the suit did not fall under the "exclusive jurisdiction mandate" of 33 U.S.C. § 1369(b), which requires that an application for review be lodged in the court of appeals within 120 days of the EPA administrator's action.

19. Wos v. E.M.A.*, No. 12-98 (4th Cir., 674 F.3d 290; cert. granted Sept. 25, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting respondents; argued on Jan. 8, 2013). The Question Presented is whether N.C. Gen. Stat. § 108A-57 is preempted by the Medicaid Act's anti-lien provision as it was construed in Arkansas Department of Health & Human Services v. Ahlborn, 547 U.S. 268 (2006), an issue on which the North Carolina Supreme Court and the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit are in conflict.

    Decided Mar. 20, 2013 (568 U.S. __). Fourth Circuit/Affirmed. Justice Kennedy for a 6-3 Court (Breyer, J., concurring; Roberts, C.J., dissenting, joined by Scalia and Thomas, JJ.). Fourth Circuit/Affirmed. Justice Kennedy for a 6-3 Court (Breyer, J., concurring; Roberts, C.J., dissenting, joined by Scalia and Thomas, JJ.). The Court held that the anti-lien provision of the federal Medicaid Act preempts a North Carolina law requiring that up to one-third of any damages recovered for tortious injury be paid to the State to reimburse it for the medical treatment payments it made on behalf of the injured party. When a State makes payments for medical treatment of an injured party, the federal Medicaid Act requires that the State seek reimbursement of those payments out of any tort recovery by the injured party. But an anti-lien provision in the Medicaid Act also prohibits the State from taking any portion of those damages that are not "designated as payments for medical care." North Carolina's law—as construed by the North Carolina Supreme Court—creates an irrebuttable presumption that if the State's medical payments exceed one-third of the injured party's tort recovery, one-third of that recovery is designated as payments for medical care, even if the settlement or a jury verdict attributes less than one-third of the recovery to medical care. Thus, North Carolina argued, because the law designates that portion as attributable to medical care, the State does not violate the anti-lien provision by claiming one-third of the recovery. Respondent E.M.A. recovered a tort settlement for medical malpractice, and the State attempted to claim one-third of the settlement under the law. The tort settlement did not allocate damages between medical and nonmedical claims. E.M.A. then claimed that the State's reimbursement scheme violated the federal anti-lien provision, and the Court agreed. Because the North Carolina law would permit, in some cases, the State to take portions of tort recoveries that were not actually attributable to medical expenses, the Court held that the law violates the anti-lien provision and is therefore preempted. Rather than providing a process for determining what portion of a tort recovery is actually attributable to medical expenses, the North Carolina law effectively applied an across-the-board presumption that one-third of the recovery represents medical expenses. The Court explained that this "irrebuttable, one-size-fits-all statutory presumption is incompatible with the Medicaid Act's clear mandate that a State may not demand any portion of a beneficiary's tort recovery except the share that is attributable to medical expenses." Thus, a judicial finding or approval of an allocation between medical and nonmedical damages is binding as to the State's recovery. And in cases where, as here, the recovery does not allocate money among the medical and nonmedical claims, trial judges and trial lawyers "can find objective benchmarks to make projections of the damages" likely attributable to medical expenses, which the State may recover.

Gibson Dunn – Counsel for Standard Fire Insurance Company

20. Standard Fire Insurance Company v. Knowles*, No. 11-1450 (8th Cir., No. 11-8030, unreported; cert. granted Aug. 31, 2012; argued on Jan. 7, 2013). Whether, after Smith v. Bayer Corp., 131 S. Ct. 2368 (2011), when a named plaintiff attempts to defeat a defendant's right of removal under the Class Action Fairness Act of 2005 by filing with a class action complaint a "stipulation" that attempts to limit the damages he "seeks" for the absent putative class members to less than the $5 million threshold for federal jurisdiction, and the defendant establishes that the actual amount in controversy, absent the "stipulation," exceeds $5 million, is the "stipulation" binding on absent class members so as to destroy federal jurisdiction?

Decided Mar. 19, 2013 (568 U.S. __). Eighth Circuit/Vacated and remanded. Justice Breyer for a unanimous Court. Greg Knowles filed a putative class action in Arkansas state court against the Standard Fire Insurance Company. Knowles sought to certify a class of Arkansas policyholders and attached an affidavit to the complaint stipulating that he would "not at any time during this case . . . seek damages for the class . . . in excess of $5,000,000 in the aggregate." Standard Fire removed the case to federal district court under the Class Action Fairness Act of 2005 ("CAFA"), arguing that the amount in controversy exceeded CAFA's $5 million amount-in-controversy requirement. Although the district court found that the amount in controversy would have been above the $5 million threshold absent the stipulation, it remanded the case to state court in light of the stipulation. The Court held that Knowles' stipulation cannot defeat federal jurisdiction under CAFA. It explained that "stipulations must be binding," and a plaintiff "who files a proposed class action cannot legally bind members of the proposed class before the class is certified." Because the stipulation did not bind anyone other than Knowles, he had not reduced the value of the putative class members' claims. The Court further stated that, by its plain terms, CAFA provides that "the claims of the individual class members shall be aggregated" to determine whether jurisdiction exists. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(6). Thus, the statute commands the district court "to determine whether it has jurisdiction by adding up the value of the claim of each person who falls within the definition of [a] proposed class and determine whether the resulting sum exceeds $5 million." If the sum exceeds $5 million, the district court has jurisdiction under CAFA.

Gibson Dunn – Counsel for John Wiley & Sons, Inc.

21. Supap Kirtsaeng, dba Bluechristine99 v. John Wiley & Sons, Inc.*, No. 11-697 (2d Cir., 654 F.3d 210; cert. granted Apr. 16, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting respondent; argued on Oct. 29, 2012). How do Section 602(a)(1) of the Copyright Act, which makes it impermissible to import a work "without the authority of the owner" of the copyright, and Section 109(a), which allows the owner of a copy "lawfully made under this title" to sell or otherwise dispose of the copy without the copyright owner's permission, apply to a copy that was made and legally acquired abroad and then imported into the United States? Can such a foreign-made product never be resold in the United States without the copyright owner's permission; sometimes be resold within the United States without permission, but only after the owner approves an earlier sale in the United States; or always be resold without permission within the United States, so long as the copyright owner authorized the first sale abroad?

    Decided Mar. 19, 2013 (568 U.S. __). Second Circuit/Reversed and remanded. Justice Breyer for a 6-3 Court (Kagan, J., concurring, joined by Alito, J.; Ginsburg, J., dissenting, joined by Kennedy, J. and joined in part by Scalia, J.). The Court held that the "first sale" doctrine applies to copies of copyrighted work legally produced and sold outside of the United States. The Copyright Act grants copyright owners the "exclusive right" to distribute their copyrighted work, subject to certain limitations. One such limitation is the "first sale" doctrine, which allows the owner of a particular copy of copyrighted work—"lawfully made under this title"—to resell the copy as he wishes. At the same time, the Copyright Act provides that the importation of copyrighted work into the United States without the copyright owner's permission violates the copyright owner's exclusive right of distribution. The Court determined that the "first sale" doctrine's application to copies "lawfully made under this title" includes all copies that are made in compliance with the Copyright Act, even if those copies are made outside of the United States. Therefore, the Act's importation provision does not prohibit a buyer from legally purchasing a copy in another country and then reselling it in the United States without the copyright owner's provision. The Court concluded that this interpretation of the Copyright Act was supported by the text, history, and context of the "first sale" doctrine provision, and by the "first sale" doctrine's common-law history.

22. Levin v. United States*, No. 11-1351 (9th Cir., 663 F.3d 1059; cert. granted Sept. 25, 2012; argued on Jan. 15, 2013). Whether suit may be brought against the United States for battery committed to a civilian by military medical personnel acting within the scope of their employment.

Decided Mar. 4, 2013 (568 U.S. __). Ninth Circuit/Reversed and remanded. Justice Ginsburg for a 9-0 Court (Scalia, J., declining to join footnotes 6 and 7). The Court held that 10 U.S.C. § 1089(e) establishes a right to bring a medical battery claim against the United States under the Federal Tort Claims Act ("FTCA"), 28 U.S.C. §§ 1346(b), 2671-2680, for injuries suffered at the hands of armed forces medical personnel, notwithstanding the intentional tort exception to the FTCA in § 2680(h). Section 1089(e) of the FTCA provides: "For purposes of this section, the provisions of section 2680(h) of title 28 shall not apply to any cause of action arising out of a negligent or wrongful act or omission in the performance of medical, dental, or related health care functions." The Government suggested that this language existed only to support another provision in the FTCA that immunizes federal officials against medical malpractice suits. See 28 U.S.C. § 1089(a). But the Court held that the Government's proposed reading was "unnatural," and the plainest reading of § 1089(e) is to remove the immunity that otherwise exists for intentional tort suits against the United States. In fact, the Government previously offered precisely this construction of § 1089(e) to the Court in United States v. Smith, 499 U.S. 160 (1991), and the Court accepted it. The Government's attempts in this case to disavow that reading and inject ambiguity into the statute were unavailing.

23. Amgen, Inc. v. Connecticut Retirement Plan*, No. 11-1085 (9th Cir., 660 F.3d 1170; cert. granted June 11, 2012; argued on Nov. 5, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting respondent). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether, in a misrepresentation case under SEC Rule 10b-5, the district court must require proof of materiality before certifying a plaintiff class based on the fraud-on-the-market theory. (2) Whether, in such a case, the district court must allow the defendant to present evidence rebutting the applicability of the fraud-on-the-market theory before certifying a plaintiff class based on that theory.

Decided Feb. 27, 2013 (568 U.S. ___). Ninth Circuit/Affirmed. Justice Ginsburg for a 6-3 Court (Scalia, J., dissenting and Thomas, J. dissenting; joined by Kennedy, J. and Scalia, J. except for Part 1-B). The Court held that, in securities class actions challenging false or misleading statements, the plaintiff need not prove that the alleged misstatements were material in order to obtain class certification using the so-called fraud-on-the-market presumption of reliance. In Basic Inc. v. Levinson, 485 U.S. 224 (1988), the Court recognized that "the requirement that Rule 10b-5 plaintiffs establish reliance would ordinarily preclude certification of a class action seeking money damages because individual reliance issues would overwhelm questions common to the class." However, the Basic Court held that "if a market is shown to be efficient, courts may presume that investors who traded securities in that market relied on public, material misrepresentations regarding those securities," thereby preventing the element of reliance from becoming an insuperable barrier to class certification. Connecticut Retirement sought to invoke this presumption, and Amgen argued that Connecticut Retirement could not obtain class certification unless it proved the materiality of the challenged statements. The district court disagreed and certified a class action under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(b)(3). The Ninth Circuit affirmed, and the Supreme Court agreed, holding that "[w]hile [the plaintiff] certainly must prove materiality to prevail on the merits, . . . such proof is not a prerequisite to class certification." The Supreme Court gave two reasons for its decision. First, "[b]ecause materiality is judged according to an objective standard, the materiality of . . . alleged misrepresentations and omissions is a question common to all members of [a proposed] class." Second, "the plaintiff class's inability to prove materiality would not result in individual questions predominating. Instead, a failure of proof on the issue of materiality would end the case, given that materiality is an essential element of the class members' securities-fraud claims." In short, the class was "entirely cohesive" on the issue of materiality. Because "Amgen's rebuttal evidence aimed to prove that the misrepresentations and omissions alleged in Connecticut Retirement's complaint were immaterial," the Court also rejected the argument that the district court erred by refusing to consider this evidence at the certification stage for the same reasons.

24. Gabelli v. SEC*, No. 11-1274 (2d Cir., 653 F.3d 49; cert. granted Sept. 25, 2012; argued on Jan. 8, 2013). Whether for purposes of applying the five-year limitations period under 28 U.S.C. § 2462—which provides that "except as otherwise provided by Act of Congress" any penalty action brought by the Government must be "commenced within five years from the date when the claims first accrued"—the Government's claim first accrues when the Government can first bring an action for a penalty, where Congress has not enacted a separate controlling provision.

    Decided Feb. 27, 2013 (568 U.S. __). Second Circuit/Reversed and remanded. Chief Justice Roberts for a unanimous Court. The Court held the statute of limitations applicable to the Investment Advisers Act and many other penalty provisions of the U.S. Code, 28 U.S.C. § 2462, begins to run when the alleged fraud occurs, not when it is discovered. The Court noted that the "standard rule" is that a claim accrues "when the plaintiff has a complete and present cause of action." This rule advances the purposes of the statutes of limitation—which are repose, elimination of stale claims, and certainty about a plaintiff's opportunity for recovery and a defendant's potential liabilities. The Court held that the discovery rule exception to statutes of limitation, which was created to protect individuals who had been unknowingly defrauded, does not apply to the Government when it brings an enforcement action for penalties. The Court noted several reasons the discovery rule did not apply. First, the Government is more equipped than private plaintiffs to root out and discover fraud. Second, the Court reasoned that the Government seeks different remedies than a private plaintiff. And finally, the Court noted that it would be quite difficult for lower courts to determine when the "[G]overnment" knew or reasonably should have known of fraud.

25. Clapper v. Amnesty Int'l USA*, No. 11-1025 (2d Cir., 638 F.3d 118; cert. granted May 21, 2012; argued on Oct. 29, 2012). Whether respondents lack Article III standing to seek prospective relief because they proffered no evidence that the United States would imminently acquire their international communications using Section 1881a-authorized surveillance under Section 702 of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978, 50 U.S.C. § 1881a (Supp. II 2008), and did not show that an injunction prohibiting Section 1881a-authorized surveillance would likely redress their purported injuries.

Decided Feb. 26, 2013 (568 U.S. ___). Second Circuit/Reversed and remanded. Justice Alito for a 5-4 Court (Breyer, J., dissenting; joined by Ginsburg, Sotomayor, and Kagan, JJ.). Section 702 of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978, 50 U. S. C. § 1881a, which was enacted as part of the FISA Amendments Act, allows the Attorney General and the Director of National Intelligence to acquire foreign intelligence information by jointly authorizing the surveillance of individuals who are not "United States persons" and are reasonably believed to be located outside the United States. Before doing so, the Attorney General and the Director of National Intelligence normally must obtain the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court's approval. Respondents were United States persons whose work, they alleged, requires them to engage in sensitive international communications with individuals who they believe are likely targets of surveillance under § 1881a. Respondents sought a declaration that § 1881a is unconstitutional under the Fourth and First Amendments, Article III, and separation of powers principles, as well as a permanent injunction against surveillance authorized under § 1881a. Respondents proffered two theories of standing: (1) there was an objectively reasonable likelihood that their communications would be acquired under § 1881a at some point in the future; and (2) the risk of surveillance under § 1881a was so substantial that they had been forced to take costly and burdensome measures to protect the confidentiality of their international communications. The Court rejected both theories, holding that Respondents lacked Article III standing to pursue their challenge to 50 U.S.C. § 1881a. The Court reasoned that respondents' lawsuit was based on a "chain of contingencies" that would have to occur before their communications might be at risk of eavesdropping. Because respondents had failed to show that harms to them were "certainly impending," as required in the Court's precedent, Whitmore v. Arkansas, 495 U. S. 149, 158 (1990), or "fairly traceable" to § 1881a, they could not satisfy Article III's standing requirements. Moreover, respondents could not "manufacture standing by choosing to make expenditures based on hypothetical future harm."

26. Marx v. General Revenue Corp.*, No. 11-1175 (10th Cir., 668 F.3d 1174; cert. granted May 29, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting petitioner; argued on Nov. 7, 2012). Whether a prevailing defendant in a case under the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act may be awarded costs where the lawsuit was not "brought in bad faith and for the purpose of harassment" under 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(a)(3).

    Decided Feb. 26, 2013 (568 U.S. ___). Tenth Circuit/Affirmed. Justice Thomas for a 7-2 Court (Sotomayor, J., dissenting; joined by Kagan, J.). The Court held that under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 54(d)(1), a prevailing defendant in a Fair Debt Collection Practices Act ("FDCPA"), 15 U.S.C. § 1692, suit may be awarded costs where the lawsuit was not brought in bad faith and for the purpose of harassment. Section 1692k(a)(3) of the FDCPA provides that "[o]n a finding by the court that an action under this section was brought in bad faith and for the purpose of harassment, the court may award to the defendant attorney's fees reasonable in relation to the work expended and costs." Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 54(d)(1) gives district courts discretion to award costs to prevailing defendants "[u]nless a federal statute . . . provides otherwise." Here, the petitioner had defaulted on a student loan and brought suit against the debt collector, General Revenue Corp., claiming that it used illegal debt collection practices in violation of the FDCPA. The district court ruled for General Revenue Corp., finding that petitioner had failed to provide evidence of any FDCPA violation. General Revenue Corp. moved for remuneration for costs, and the district court awarded them under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 54(d)(1). The Tenth Circuit affirmed, and the Supreme Court agreed, holding that Section 1629k(a)(3) did not displace Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 54(d)(1) and "the venerable presumption that prevailing parties are entitled to costs," and therefore the district court had discretion to award costs to a prevailing defendant in an FDCPA case without finding that the plaintiff brought the case in bad faith and for the purpose of harassment.

27. Chaidez v. United States*, No. 11-820 (7th Cir., 655 F.3d 684; cert. granted Apr. 30, 2012; argued on Nov. 1, 2012). Whether Padilla v. Kentucky, 130 S. Ct. 1473 (2010), in which the Court held that criminal defendants receive ineffective assistance of counsel under the Sixth Amendment when their attorneys fail to advise them that pleading guilty to an offense will subject them to deportation, apply to persons whose convictions became final before its announcement.

    Decided Feb. 20, 2013 (568 U.S. ___). Seventh Circuit/Affirmed. Justice Kagan for a 7-2 Court (Thomas, J., concurring in the judgment. Sotomayor, J., dissenting; joined by Ginsburg, J.). The Court held that Padilla v. Kentucky, 559 U.S. 356 (2010), which held that the Sixth Amendment requires criminal defense attorneys to inform their clients of the deportation implications of guilty pleas, does not apply retroactively to cases already final on direct review. At the time Padilla was announced, petitioner Chaidez—a lawful permanent resident of the United States seeking to avoid deportation—had already petitioned a federal district court to vacate her 2004 conviction for mail fraud. Applying Teague v. Lane, 489 U.S. 288 (1989), in which the Supreme Court held that when a federal court announces a new rule of criminal procedure, it cannot be applied retroactively in cases on collateral review, the district court vacated Chaidez's conviction. The district court reasoned that Padilla was not a "new rule" under Teague, but rather a new application of the well-established rule that attorneys in criminal cases must provide reasonably effective assistance. On appeal, a divided panel of the Seventh Circuit reversed, holding instead that Padilla announced a new rule that could not be applied retroactively to Chaidez's challenge. The Court agreed with the Seventh Circuit, finding that Padilla did more than straightforwardly apply the test from Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668 (1984), to determine whether failure to inform a criminal defendant of the potential immigration implications of a guilty plea constituted ineffective assistance of counsel. Instead, Padilla crafted a new rule by resolving the threshold question of whether immigration implications constituted only a "collateral consequence" of a criminal conviction. In Hill v. Lockhart, 474 U.S. 52 (1985), the Supreme Court explicitly left open the question of whether advice concerning such collateral consequences is subject to Sixth Amendment requirements. Therefore, when the Court in Padilla held that advice about the immigration implications of guilty pleas falls within the ambit of the Sixth Amendment, it crafted a "new rule" under Teague. Accordingly, "defendants whose convictions became final prior to Padilla"—including petitioner Chaidez—"cannot benefit from its holding."

28. Evans v. Michigan*, No. 11-1327 (Mich. Sup. Ct., 491 Mich. 1; cert. granted June 11, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting respondent; argued on Nov. 6, 2012). Whether the Double Jeopardy Clause of the U.S. Constitution bars retrial after the trial judge erroneously holds a particular fact to be an element of the offense and then grants a mistrial directed verdict of acquittal because the prosecution failed to prove that fact.

    Decided Feb. 20, 2013 (568 U.S. ___). Supreme Court of Michigan/Reversed. Justice Sotomayor for an 8-1 Court (Alito, J., dissenting). The Court held that the Double Jeopardy Clause bars retrial following a court-directed acquittal, even if the acquittal is erroneous. The petitioner set fire to an unoccupied house and was charged with burning "other real property" in violation of Michigan state law. Juxtaposing his charged offense with Michigan's common-law arson offense, which requires that the burned structure be a dwelling, petitioner argued that the State failed to prove an element of the charged offense because the State did not introduce evidence that the building was not a dwelling house. The trial court agreed, granting an acquittal on grounds that the prosecution failed to provide evidence of an element that it was not, in fact, required to prove. The Michigan Court of Appeals reversed and remanded, holding that the State was not required to prove that the building was not a dwelling house because burning "other real property" is a lesser included offense of Michigan's common-law arson offense and thus that the Double Jeopardy Clause did not bar Evans's retrial. The Supreme Court of Michigan affirmed. Relying on decades of well-settled double jeopardy precedent, the Supreme Court reversed. The Court first recognized that for the purposes of the Double Jeopardy Clause, "[a] mistaken acquittal is an acquittal nonetheless," even if its foundation is "egregiously erroneous." Fong Foo v. United States, 369 U.S. 141, 143 (1962) (per curiam). The Court read Fong Foo and its progeny to define an acquittal as encompassing any ruling that the prosecution's proof is insufficient to establish criminal liability for an offense. Stressing the line between procedural dismissals unrelated to factual guilt or innocence and substantive rulings that go to the defendant's lack of criminal culpability, the Court held that the trial court's ruling in this case related to the ultimate question of petitioner's guilt or innocence. Because the judgment of acquittal—however erroneous—resolved the question of petitioner's guilt or innocence on the basis of the sufficiency of the evidence, rather than on unrelated procedural grounds, the trial court's ruling concluded the proceedings absolutely. The Court dismissed respondent's proposed distinction between a trial court erroneously adding an extraneous "element" and a trial court "misinterpret[ing]" or "misconstru[ing]" a statute as "far too fine a distinction to be meaningful." The antecedent legal error here affected only the accuracy of the determination to acquit, not its essential character—that of acquittal. The Court also declined to revisit the line of cases flowing from Fong Foo, which purported to distinguish substantive and procedural rulings for purposes of the Double Jeopardy Clause.

29. Gunn v. Minton*, No. 11-1118 (Tex., 355 S.W.3d 634; cert. granted Oct. 5, 2012; argued on Jan. 16, 2013). Did the Federal Circuit depart from the standard this Court articulated in Grable & Sons Metal Products, Inc. v. Darue Eng'g & Mfg., 545 U.S. 308 (2005), for "arising under" jurisdiction of the federal courts under 28 U.S.C. § 1338, when it held that state law legal malpractice claims against trial lawyers for their handling of underlying patent matters come within the exclusive jurisdiction of the federal courts? Because the Federal Circuit has exclusive jurisdiction over appeals involving patents, are state courts and federal courts strictly following the Federal Circuit's mistaken standard, thereby magnifying its jurisdictional error and sweeping broad swaths of state law claims—which involve no actual patents and have no impact on actual patent rights—into the federal courts?

    Decided Feb. 20, 2013 (568 U.S. __). Texas Supreme Court/Reversed and remanded. Chief Justice Roberts for a unanimous Court. The Court held that 28 U.S.C. § 1338(a), which vests jurisdiction over cases "arising under" federal patent law exclusively in the Federal Circuit, does not deprive state courts of subject matter jurisdiction over a legal malpractice claim that relates to a question of patent law. Under Grable & Sons Metal Prods., Inc. v. Darue Engineering & Manufacturing, 545 U.S. 308, 314 (2005), a state-law cause of action arises under federal law when it presents a federal issue that is: (1) necessarily raised, (2) actually disputed, (3) substantial, and (4) capable of resolution in federal court without disturbing the federal-state balance that Congress created. Here, the first two requirements were met: the plaintiff could prevail on his malpractice claim only by showing that his attorney failed to make a patent law argument that would have changed the outcome of his underlying patent suit. But the patent issue was not "substantial" under Grable, which focuses on the importance of the issue to the federal system as a whole, not whether the issue is important in the case before the court. Because this plaintiff brought a malpractice case, the patent issue arose only in a hypothetical sense by imagining a world in which the plaintiff's attorney argued the patent case differently. Accordingly, allowing a state court to hear the plaintiff's malpractice claim would not undermine the development of a uniform body of patent law and would not deprive the Federal Circuit of its authority to resolve novel patent issues itself. The case also failed to satisfy Grable's fourth requirement, the Court reasoned, because states have a special interest in maintaining standards of practice for attorneys, and there was no reason to suppose Congress intended to require that malpractice cases be heard in federal court simply because they involve a tangential question of patent law.

30. Johnson v. Williams*, No. 11-465 (9th Cir., 646 F.3d 636; cert. granted Jan. 13, 2012, limited to Question 1; argued on Oct. 3, 2012). Whether a habeas petitioner's claim has been "adjudicated on the merits" for purposes of 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d) where the state court denied relief in an explained decision but did not expressly acknowledge a federal-law basis for the claim.

Decided Feb. 20, 2013 (568 U.S. ___). Ninth Circuit/Reversed and remanded. Justice Alito for a 9-0 Court (Scalia, J., concurring in the judgment). The Court held that, for purposes of 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d), a federal habeas court must presume, subject to rebuttal, that a federal claim was "adjudicated on the merits in State court" when a state court rules against a defendant in an opinion that addresses some issues but does not expressly address the federal claim. The Court reasoned that this conclusion followed from its earlier decision in Harrington v. Richter, 131 S. Ct. 770 (2011), in which it held that a federal habeas court must likewise presume that a claim has been adjudicated on the merits when a state court issues an order summarily rejecting all claims raised by a defendant, including a federal claim that the defendant later raises in a federal habeas proceeding. The Court suggested that the presumption can be rebutted—either by the habeas petitioner (to show that the federal claim should be reviewed de novo) or by the state (to show that the federal claim is procedurally defaulted)—where a state standard is less protective than the applicable federal standard or where the federal precedent is mentioned in passing. With respect to the federal claim at issue in this case (a Sixth Amendment jury trial claim), the Court found that the presumption was not adequately rebutted.

31. Henderson v. United States*, No. 11-9307 (5th Cir., 646 F.3d 223; cert. granted June 25, 2012; argued on Nov. 28, 2012). Whether, when the governing law is unsettled at the time of trial but settled in the defendant's favor by the time of appeal, an appellate court reviewing for "plain error" should apply the time-of-appeal standard in Johnson v. United States, 520 U.S. 461 (1997), as the First, Second, Sixth, Tenth, and Eleventh Circuits do, or should apply the Ninth Circuit's time-of-trial standard, which the D.C. Circuit and Fifth Circuit have adopted.

    Decided Feb. 20, 2013 (568 U.S. ___). Fifth Circuit/Reversed and remanded. Justice Breyer for a 6-3 Court (Scalia, J., dissenting, joined by Thomas and Alito, JJ.). The Court held that as long as an error is "plain" under Rule 52(b) at the time of appellate review, the appellate court may consider the error even though it was not brought to the trial court's attention. In Johnson v. United States, 520 U.S. 461 (1997), the Court held that an appellate court may review an error that was clearly correct under circuit precedent when made, but that has since become plainly erroneous due to an intervening authoritative legal decision. Johnson thus forecloses the government's position here—that whether an error was plain should always be determined based on the law at the time the error was made. In light of Rule 52's general concern for fairness, and Johnson's holding that plain error review applies to errors that were clearly correct when the lower court ruled, there is no reason why plain error review should not also apply to errors that were merely unsettled when the lower court ruled. To hold otherwise would bring about unjustifiably different treatment among similarly situated defendants. Moreover, there is no reason to think defense counsel will deliberately refrain from presenting claims of error to the trial court on the chance that those issues will be resolved in their favor prior to the appeal.

32. Bailey v. United States*, No. 11-770 (2d Cir., 652 F.2d 197; cert. granted June 4, 2012; argued on Nov. 1, 2012). Whether, pursuant to Michigan v. Summers, 452 U.S. 692 (1981), police officers may detain an individual incident to the execution of a search warrant when the individual has left the immediate vicinity of the premises before the warrant is executed.

    Decided Feb. 19, 2013 (568 U.S. ___). Second Circuit/Reversed and remanded. Justice Kennedy for a 6-3 Court. (Scalia, J., concurring; joined by Ginsburg and Kagan, JJ. Breyer, J., dissenting; joined by Thomas and Alito, JJ.) After observing him depart his apartment home, police detained Chunon Bailey pursuant to a warrant to search the premises. Bailey was seized approximately one mile away from his apartment home. Bailey moved to suppress evidence derived from his seizure. The United States District Court for the Eastern District of New York denied the motion to suppress, and the Second Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed that ruling. The Court of Appeals interpreted the Supreme Court's opinion in Michigan v. Summers, 452 U.S. 692 (1981), "to authorize[e] law enforcement to detain an occupant of premises subject to a valid search warrant when the person is seen leaving those premises and the detention is effected as soon as reasonably possible." 652 F.3d 197, 208 (2011) (emphasis added). The Supreme Court reversed the Court of Appeals, holding that Summers only justifies the detention of occupants within the immediate vicinity of the premises to be searched. The Court reasoned that none of the three law enforcement interests identified as justifying the detention in Summers—officer safety, facilitating the completion of the search, and preventing flight—"applies with the same or similar force to the detention of recent occupants beyond the immediate vicinity of the premises to be searched." The Court also noted that detention away from the premises more closely "resemble[s] a full-fledged arrest" than detention of a current occupant incidental to a search of the premises, which the Court has described as "only an incremental intrusion on personal liberty when the search of a home has been authorized by a valid warrant."

33. Chafin v. Chafin*, No. 11-1347 (11th Cir., 2012 WL 231213; cert. granted Aug. 13, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting petitioner; argued on Dec. 5, 2012). Whether an appeal of a District Court's ruling on a Petition for Return of Children pursuant to the International Child Abduction Remedies Act and the Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction becomes moot after the child at issue returns to his or her country of habitual residence, as in the Eleventh Circuit's Bekier v. Bekier, 248 F.3d 1051 (2001), leaving the United States Court system lacking any power or jurisdiction to affect any further issue in the matter or should the United States Courts retain power over their own appellate process, as in the Fourth Circuit's Fawcett v. McRoberts, 326 F.3d 491 (2003), and maintain jurisdiction throughout the appellate process giving the concerned party an opportunity for proper redress.

Decided Feb. 19, 2013 (568 U.S. __). 11th Circuit/Vacated and remanded. Chief Justice Roberts for a 9-0 Court (Ginsburg, J., concurring; joined by Scalia and Breyer, JJ.). In 1988, the United States ratified the Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction and passed ICARA as implementing legislation. ICARA directs U.S. courts to order the prompt return of any children removed from their country of habitual residence in violation of a custody determination of that foreign country. In general, ICARA also provides that courts ordering a child's return must require defendants to pay the plaintiffs' legal fees and the child's transportation costs. After petitioner filed for a divorce and child custody in Alabama state court, respondent initiated this case in the District Court for the Northern District of Alabama, seeking an order under ICARA for the return of their minor daughter, E.C., to Scotland. The district court ruled in favor of respondent, who then returned to Scotland with E.C. The Eleventh Circuit dismissed petitioner's appeal of the district court order, reasoning that appeal of a return order is moot after the child has been removed from the United States pursuant to that order. The Supreme Court disagreed, holding that such a case is not moot and that U.S. courts retain jurisdiction to hear an appeal of a return order even after the child has been returned to his or her country of habitual residence. The Court explained that petitioner's dispute was still alive because he continued to contest key issues in the case and because the relief he sought—reversal of the district court's removal order and vacatur of the court's expense orders—was typical appellate relief. Although enforcement of any order in petitioner's favor may be uncertain given respondent's and E.C.'s current residence overseas, "such uncertainly does not typically render cases moot" because there is still "a possibility of effectual relief for the prevailing parent."

34. Florida v. Harris*, No. 11-817 (Supreme Court of Florida, 71 So. 3d 756; cert. granted Mar. 26, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting petitioner; argued on Oct. 31, 2012). Whether an alert by a well-trained narcotics detection dog certified to detect illegal contraband is insufficient to establish probable cause for the search of a vehicle.

    Decided Feb. 19, 2013 (568 U.S.___). Supreme Court of Florida/Reversed. Justice Kagan for a unanimous Court. The Court held that the State's introduction into evidence of an exhaustive set of records, including a log of the narcotics detection dog's prior performance in the field, is not required to establish that an alert by the dog established probable cause to search a vehicle. The Court concluded that such a requirement would be inconsistent with the practical, common-sense, totality-of-the-circumstances test the Court's precedents have consistently used to ascertain the existence of probable cause. The decision below, the Court explained, "flouted this established approach to determining probable cause" by creating "a strict evidentiary checklist, whose every item the State must tick off." The Court rejected the premise that records of a dog's prior field performance are "the gold standard" of reliability, concluding instead that the better measure of a dog's reliability "comes away from the field, in controlled testing environments." The Court emphasized that the decisive question at a probable-cause hearing is not whether law enforcement has complied with an "inflexible set of evidentiary requirements." Rather, the question "is whether all the facts surrounding a dog's alert, viewed through the lens of common sense, would make a reasonably prudent person think that a search would reveal contraband or evidence of a crime."

35. FTC v. Phoebe Putney Health*, No. 11-1160 (11th Cir., 663 F.3d 1369; cert. granted June 25, 2012; argued on Nov. 26, 2012). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether the Georgia legislature, by vesting the local government entity with general corporate powers to acquire and lease out hospitals and other property, has "clearly articulated and affirmatively expressed" a "state policy to displace competition" under the "state action doctrine" in the market for hospital services. (2) Whether such a state policy, even if clearly articulated, would be sufficient to validate the anticompetitive conduct in this case, given that the local government entity neither actively participated in negotiating the terms of the hospital sale nor has any practical means of overseeing the hospital's operation.

    Decided February 19, 2013 (568 U.S. ___). Eleventh Circuit/Reversed and remanded. Justice Sotomayor for a unanimous Court. The Court held that the state-action immunity doctrine, which exempts certain acts of local governmental entities from federal antitrust scrutiny, does not apply to special-purpose "hospital authorities" created by state law and granted general corporate powers. Under the state-action immunity doctrine, the activities of local governmental entities are immune from federal antitrust laws if they are undertaken pursuant to a "clearly articulated and affirmatively expressed" state policy to displace competition. Cmty. Commc'ns. Co. v. Boulder, 455 U.S. 40, 52 (1982). This test is satisfied if the anticompetitive effect of the local entity's action was the "foreseeable result" of that which the state authorized. The Court held that a Georgia law that created public hospital authorities to serve the state's indigent population, and then granted those authorities general corporate powers such as the ability to acquire hospitals, was not sufficient to pass the clear articulation test. Nothing about Georgia's grant of general corporate powers, the Court reasoned, indicated that the state had foreseen and implicitly endorsed any anticompetitive effects that might result from the activities of the hospital authorities. Therefore, the Court held that the hospital authorities were not immune from federal antitrust review.

36. Sebelius v. Auburn Regional Medical Center*, No. 11-1231 (D.C. Cir., 642 F.3d 1145; cert. granted June 25, 2012; argued on Dec. 4, 2012). Whether the 180-day statutory time limit under 42 U.S.C. § 1395oo(a)(3), for filing an appeal with the Provider Reimbursement Review Board from a final Medicare payment determination made by a fiscal intermediary is subject to equitable tolling.

    Decided Jan. 22, 2013 (568 U.S. __). D.C. Circuit/Reversed and remanded. Justice Ginsburg for a 9-0 Court (Sotomayor, J., concurring). The Court held that (1) Section 1395oo(a)(3)'s 180-day statutory time limit for filing an appeal of Medicare reimbursements with the Provider Reimbursement Review Board (PRRB) is not jurisdictional, (2) the HHS Secretary's regulation extending Section 1395oo(a)(3)'s 180-day window to three years after notice of the reimbursement amount upon a showing of "good cause" is a permissible interpretation of Section 1395oo(a)(3), and (3) the Secretary's regulatory requirement is not subject to equitable tolling. In 2006, respondent hospitals learned that there had been a systematic undercalculation of their Medicare reimbursements from 1987 through 1994. Within 180-days of learning about the miscalculation, the hospitals filed an appeal with the PRRB, seeking remuneration for the underpayment. The Secretary of Health and Human Services had adopted a regulation permitting hospitals to file appeals for up to three years from the time they received word of their reimbursement rate from the financial contractor, if they could show "good cause" for failing to meet the usual 180-day deadline set by Section 1395oo(a)(3). Because the hospitals had filed more than ten years after expiration of the statutory deadline, the PRRB dismissed the appeals on grounds that it lacked jurisdiction and had no equitable powers to extend the window beyond the Secretary's three year outer limit. The D.C. Circuit reversed, finding that equitable tolling was available to the hospitals as a matter of fairness. The Supreme Court disagreed, holding that Section 1395oo(a)(3) did not limit PRRB's jurisdiction to hear the hospital's appeals because Congress did not clearly state that Section 1395oo(a)(3) was jurisdictional and that the Secretary's regulation was both reasonable and not subject to equitable tolling. The Court noted that it had never applied the presumption of equitable tolling to an agency's internal appeal deadline, and explained that the imposition of tolling would "essentially gut the Secretary's [time] requirement." Because the Secretary's administrative regime survived Chevron review, it was entitled to deference, and the respondents' complaint was lawfully time-barred.

37. Lozman v. Riviera Beach*, No. 11-626 (11th Cir., 649 F.3d 1259; cert. granted Feb. 21, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting petitioner; supplemental briefing on mootness ordered Aug. 14, 2012; argued on Oct. 1, 2012). Whether a floating structure that is indefinitely moored, receives power and other utilities from shore, and is not intended to be used in maritime transportation or commerce constitutes a "vessel" under 1 U.S.C. § 3, thus triggering federal maritime jurisdiction.

    Decided Jan. 15, 2013 (568 U.S. __). Eleventh Circuit/Reversed. Justice Breyer for a 7-2 Court. Sotomayor, J., dissenting; joined by Kennedy, J.). Petitioner Lozman's floating home was a house-like plywood structure with empty bilge space underneath the main floor to keep it afloat. He had it towed several times before deciding on a marina owned by the City of Riviera Beach. After various disputes with Lozman and unsuccessful efforts to evict him from the marina, the City brought a federal admiralty lawsuit in rem against the floating home, seeking a lien for dockage fees and damages for trespass. Lozman moved to dismiss the suit for lack of admiralty jurisdiction. The Supreme Court held that Lozman's floating home was not a "vessel" for purposes of 1 U.S.C. § 3, and therefore federal maritime jurisdiction was not triggered. The Court reasoned that, except for the fact that the structure floated, nothing about the floating home suggested that it was intended to transport people or cargo over water. The Court also observed that its interpretation of the statute was consistent with the statute's language and purpose, which "revealed little reason to classify floating homes as vessels" because owners of floating homes cannot easily escape liability by sailing away from their homes; faced no special sea dangers; and did not significantly engage in port-related commerce. Finally, the Court noted that its interpretation was consistent with state law in States in which owners of floating homes had congregated in communities, as those laws treat structures that meet the "floating home" definition like ordinary land-based homes rather than like "vessels."

38. Already, LLC v. Nike, Inc.*, No. 11-982 (2d Cir., 663 F.3d 89; cert. granted June 25, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting vacatur and remand; argued on Nov. 7, 2012). Whether a federal district court is divested of Article III jurisdiction over a party's challenge to the validity of a federally registered trademark if the registrant promises not to assert its mark against the party's then-existing commercial activities.

    Decided Jan. 9, 2013 (568 U.S. __). Second Circuit/Affirmed. Chief Justice Roberts for a 9-0 Court (Kennedy, J., concurring; joined by Thomas, Alito, and Sotomayor, JJ.). Nike filed suit, alleging that two of Already's athletic shoes violated Nike's Air Force 1 trademark. Already denied the allegations and filed a counterclaim challenging the validity of Nike's Air Force 1 trademark. While the suit was pending, Nike issued a "Covenant Not to Sue," promising not to raise any trademark or unfair competition claims against Already or any affiliated entity based on Already's existing footwear designs, or any future Already designs that constituted a "colorable imitation" of Already's current products. Nike then moved to dismiss its claims with prejudice, and to dismiss Already's counterclaim without prejudice on the ground that the covenant had extinguished the case or controversy. Already opposed dismissal of its counterclaim, contending that Nike had not established that its covenant had mooted the case. The Supreme Court applied the voluntary cessation doctrine and held that Nike's unconditional and irrevocable covenant not to enforce its trademark against a competitor's existing products and any future "colorable imitations" mooted Already's action to have the trademark declared invalid. The breadth of Nike's covenant was sufficient to satisfy the voluntary cessation doctrine because it was unconditional and irrevocable and covered not just current or previous designs, but also colorable imitations. Once Nike demonstrated that the covenant encompassed all of Already's allegedly unlawful conduct, it was incumbent on Already to indicate that it engages in or has sufficiently concrete plans to engage in activities that would arguably infringe Nike's trademark yet not be covered by the covenant. Because Already failed to do so, the case was moot.

39. Smith v. United States*, No. 11-8976 (D.C. Cir., 651 F.3d 30; cert. granted June 21, 2012; limited to Question 2; argued on Nov. 6, 2012). Whether withdrawing from a conspiracy prior to the statute of limitations period negates an element of a conspiracy charge such that, once a defendant meets his burden of production that he did so withdraw, the burden of persuasion rests with the Government to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that he was a member of the conspiracy during the relevant period.

Decided Jan. 9, 2013 (568 U.S. __). D.C. Circuit/Affirmed. Justice Scalia for a unanimous Court. Petitioner was convicted of, among other things, criminal conspiracy to distribute illegal narcotics, and argued that the district court erred in instructing the jury that he must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that he did not withdraw from the conspiracy outside the applicable statute of limitations. The Court of Appeals affirmed his conviction, and the Supreme Court affirmed. The Court reasoned that requiring a defendant to prove withdrawal does not violate the Due Process Clause because "[w]ithdrawal does not negate an element of the conspiracy crimes," and "although union of withdrawal with a statute-of-limitations defense can free the defendant of criminal liability, it does not place upon the prosecution a constitutional responsibility to prove that he did not withdraw." Instead, as with other affirmative defenses, the burden is properly placed on the defendant. Moreover, although Congress could have reassigned the burden to the prosecution, it did not do so here—a "practical and fair" approach because "[o]n the matter of withdrawal, the informational asymmetry heavily favors the defendant."

40. Los Angeles County Flood Control v. Natural Resources*, No. 11-460 (9th Cir., 673 F.3d 880; cert. granted June 25, 2012; limited to Question 2; SG as amicus, supporting neither party; argued on Dec. 4, 2012). In South Florida Water Management District v. Miccosukee Tribe of Indians, 541 U.S. 95, 105 (2004), the Supreme Court held that transfer of water within a single body of water cannot constitute a "discharge" for purposes of the Clean Water Act. The question presented is whether when water flows from one portion of a river that is navigable water of the United States into a lower portion of the same river, through a concrete channel or other engineered improvement in the river constructed for flood and stormwater control as part of a municipal separate storm sewer system, there can be a "discharge" from an "outfall" under the Clean Water Act.

    Decided Jan. 8, 2013 (568 U.S. __). Ninth Circuit/Reversed and remanded. Justice Ginsburg for a 9-0 Court (Alito, J., concurring in the judgment only). The Court held that the flow of water from an improved portion of a navigable waterway into an unimproved portion of the same waterway does not qualify as a "discharge of a pollutant" under the Clean Water Act. The district court found that the record was insufficient to warrant a finding that petitioner's "municipal separate storm sewer systems," concrete channels within the Los Angeles and San Gabriel Rivers, had discharged pollutants into the rivers. The Ninth Circuit reversed, holding that a discharge had occurred when polluted water detected in the improved portion of the waterways flowed downstream into the unimproved portions of the same waterways. In keeping with the Court's holding in South Florida Water Management District v. Miccosukee Tribe, 541 U.S. 95, 109-112 (2004), where it held that the transfer of polluted water between "two parts of the same water body" is not a discharge, the Court reversed. Because of its prior holding in Miccosukee, the Court noted that it was "hardly surprising" that both parties and the United States as amicus curiae agreed that the flow of polluted water from one portion of a river, through a concrete channel, and then into a lower portion of the same river does not constitute a "discharge." In Miccosukee, polluted water was removed from and then returned to the same water body; here, the Court reasoned, polluted water simply flowed "from one portion of the water body to another." Unless the transfer of polluted water is between "meaningfully distinct water bodies," as the Court explained in Miccosukee, it does not qualify as a "discharge" under the Clean Water Act.

41. Tibbals v. Carter*, No. 11-218 (6th Cir., 644 F.3d 329; cert. granted Mar. 19, 2012; argued on Oct. 9, 2012). (1) Whether capital prisoners have a right to competence in habeas proceedings under Rees v. Peyton, 384 U.S. 312 (1966), which involved an incompetent death row inmate's attempt to withdraw his certiorari petition. (2) Whether a court can order an indefinite stay of habeas proceedings under Rees.

    Decided Jan. 8, 2013 (568 U.S. __). Sixth Circuit/Reversed. Justice Thomas for a unanimous Court. Decided with Ryan v. Gonzales, No. 10-103. The Court held that state prisoners adjudged incompetent have no statutory right to a stay of their federal habeas corpus proceedings. The Ninth Circuit and the Sixth Circuit, citing different federal statutes, had both concluded that death row inmates are entitled to a suspension of their federal habeas proceedings when found incompetent. The Supreme Court reversed both courts. Specifically, the Court held that its prior decision in Rees v. Peyton, 384 U.S. 312 (1966) (per curiam), did not recognize a statutory right to competence in federal habeas proceedings. The Court also held that 18 U.S.C. § 3599, which guarantees a right to federally funded counsel, does not provide a state prisoner with the right to suspend his federal habeas proceedings when he is adjudged incompetent. The Court reasoned that the assertion of such a right lacked any basis in the provision's text and would be difficult to square with the Court's constitutional precedents. The Court went on to note that given the backward-looking, record-based nature of habeas proceedings, counsel can generally provide effective representation to a habeas petitioner regardless of the petitioner's competence. After rejecting 18 U.S.C. § 3599 as a statutory basis for the right to competence in habeas proceedings, the Court also held that 18 U.S.C. § 4241 does not include a right to competence in habeas proceedings because it is inapplicable to habeas proceedings on its face, applying only to federal defendants and to trial proceedings prior to sentencing and at any time after the commencement of probation or supervised release. Finally, the Court held that where competence is questioned and the prisoner's claims could potentially benefit from his or her assistance, a district court should "take into account the likelihood that the petitioner will regain competence in the foreseeable future" and should not issue an indefinite stay that would "merely frustrate[] the State's attempts to defend its presumptively valid judgment."

42. Ryan v. Gonzales*, No. 10-930 (9th Cir., 623 F.3d 1242; CVSG May 31, 2011; cert. opposed Feb. 9, 2012; cert. granted Mar. 19, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting petitioners; argued on Oct. 9, 2012). Whether 18 U.S.C. § 3599(a)(2), which provides that an indigent capital state inmate pursuing federal habeas relief "shall be entitled to the appointment of one or more attorneys," entitles a death row inmate to stay the federal habeas proceedings he initiated if he is not competent to assist counsel.

Decided Jan. 8, 2013 (568 U.S. __). Ninth Circuit/Reversed. Justice Thomas for a unanimous Court. Decided with Tibbals v. Carter, No. 11-218. A summary of that opinion appears above

43. Kloeckner v. Solis*, No. 11-184 (8th Cir., 639 F.3d 834; cert. granted Jan. 13, 2012; argued on Oct. 2, 2012). The Merit Systems Protection Board is authorized to hear appeals by federal employees regarding certain adverse actions, such as dismissals. If in such an appeal the employee asserts that the challenged action was the result of unlawful discrimination, that claim is referred to as a "mixed case." The Question Presented is: If the Board decides a "mixed case" without determining the merits of the discrimination claim, whether the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit or a district court has jurisdiction over that claim.

    Decided Dec. 10, 2012 (568 U.S. ___). Eighth Circuit/Reversed. Justice Kagan for a unanimous Court. The Court held that when the Merit Systems Protection Board ("MSPB") dismisses an employee's claim on procedural grounds, the employee must seek judicial review in federal district court, not the Federal Circuit. The Civil Service Reform Act ("CSRA") permits a federal employee to seek judicial review of MSPB decisions regarding federal personnel actions. The statute provides that judicial review of the MSPB's decision should be sought in the Federal Circuit, or, if the action is a "mixed case" involving claims of discrimination under federal antidiscrimination statutes, in federal district court. 5 U.S.C. § 7703(b)(1)–(2). The court below interpreted the statute to require that mixed cases dismissed on procedural grounds be reviewed in the Federal Circuit. The Court, resolving a circuit split, found the statute straightforward: "cases of discrimination subject to [§ 7702]" shall be filed in district court, and "cases of discrimination subject to [§ 7702]" are mixed cases alleging discrimination. Therefore, the Court held, mixed cases shall be filed in district court, regardless of whether the MSPB's decision was procedural or on the merits. The Court rejected the Government's contrary argument that a procedural ruling is not a "judicially reviewable action" subject to review in the district court. The Government's reading of the statute would have stretched the meaning of "judicially reviewable action" beyond normal legal parlance, causing a strange result: under the Government's view, "to say that an agency action is not 'judicially reviewable' is to say that it is subject to judicial review in the Federal Circuit (even though not in district court)."

44. Arkansas Game & Fish Commission v. United States*, No. 11-597 (Fed. Cir., 637 F.3d 1366; cert. granted Apr. 2, 2012; argued on Oct. 3, 2012). Whether government actions that impose recurring flood invasions must continue permanently to take property within the meaning of the Takings Clause of the Fifth Amendment.

    Decided Dec. 4, 2012 (568 U.S. ____). Federal Circuit/Reversed and remanded. Justice Ginsburg for an 8-0 Court (Kagan, J. did not participate). The Court held that the Government's recurrent flooding of an owner's land may constitute a taking under the Fifth Amendment, even where the flooding is temporary. In prior decisions, the Court had separately held that flooding can constitute a taking, and that a taking need not be permanent to be compensable. The Government argued here, however, that floodings are compensable only where they are permanent, relying on a line from Sanguinetti v. United States, 264 U.S. 146, 150 (1924) ("it is, at least, necessary that the overflow . . . constitute an actual, permanent invasion of the land"). The Court disagreed. It held that this dicta from Sanguinetti was meant to summarize the Court's flooding cases to that point, all of which had involved permanent flooding, rather than to set forth a fixed rule of Takings jurisprudence. The Court dismissed the Government's concern that every passing flood, no matter how brief, would create liability; the Court's cases establish that Takings cases must be decided by weighing the relevant factors in each case. Those relevant factors include the length of the intrusion, its degree, the character of the land at issue, and the owner's reasonable, investment-backed expectations for the land's use. The Court declined to address the Government's other justification for the Federal Circuit's judgment, because that argument was not raised to the court below.

45. United States v. Bormes*, No. 11-192 (Fed. Cir., 626 F.3d 574; cert. granted Jan. 13, 2012; argued on Oct. 2, 2012). Whether the Little Tucker Act, 28 U.S.C. § 1346(a)(2), waives the sovereign immunity of the United States with respect to damages actions for violations of the Fair Credit Reporting Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1681 et seq.

    Decided Nov. 13, 2012 (568 U.S. ____). Federal Circuit/Vacated and remanded. Justice Scalia for a unanimous Court. The plaintiff, James Bormes, paid a fee to the United States over the Internet and then brought suit against the U.S. for damages under the Fair Credit Reporting Act on grounds that the fee receipt displayed too much information about his credit card. The Government countered that it was immune from lawsuits seeking money damages. The Supreme Court agreed, holding that the Little Tucker Act, 28 U.S.C. § 1346(a)(2), does not waive the Government's sovereign immunity with respect to Fair Credit Reporting Act damages actions. The Court observed that the Little Tucker Act provides the Government's consent to suit for certain damages claims premised on other laws, unless the other laws include their own judicial remedies. The Fair Credit Reporting Act, the Court reasoned, provides a detailed remedial scheme, including monetary relief in certain circumstances. Thus, the Little Tucker Act does not waive sovereign immunity with respect to Fair Credit Reporting Act claims.

Pending Cases

Gibson Dunn – Co-Counsel for University of Texas at Austin

1. Fisher v. University of Texas at Austin*, No. 11-345 (5th Cir., 631 F.3d 213; cert. granted Feb. 21, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting respondents; argued on Oct. 10, 2012). Whether this Court's decisions interpreting the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, including Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306 (2003) (holding that University of Michigan's narrowly tailored use of race as a factor in student admissions did not violate the Equal Protection Clause), permit the University of Texas at Austin's use of race in undergraduate admissions decisions.

2. Vance v. Ball State University*, No. 11-556 (7th Cir., 646 F.3d 461; cert. granted June 25, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting neither party; argued on Nov. 26, 2012). Whether, as the Second, Fourth, and Ninth Circuits have held, the Faragher and Ellerth "supervisor" liability rule (i) applies to harassment by those whom the employer vests with authority to direct and oversee their victim's daily work, or, as the First, Seventh, and Eighth Circuits have held (ii) is limited to those harassers who have the power to "hire, fire, demote, promote, transfer, or discipline" their victim.

3. Descamps v. United States*, No. 11-9540 (9th Cir., 466 Fed. App'x 563; cert. granted Aug. 31, 2012; argued on Jan. 7, 2013). Whether the Ninth Circuit's ruling in United States v. Aguila-Montes De Oca, 655 F.3d 915 (9th Cir. 2011) (en banc), that a state conviction for burglary where the statute is missing an element of the generic crime, may be subject to the "modified categorical approach" wherein judges are permitted to use the record of conviction to determine whether a state law offense is identical to a federal offense that triggers an increased sentence under the Armed Career Criminal Act, even though most other Circuit Courts of Appeal would not allow it.

4. Maracich v. Spears*, No. 12-25 (4th Cir., 675 F.3d 281; cert. granted Sept. 25, 2012; argued on Jan. 9, 2013). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether the Fourth Circuit erred in holding, contrary to every other court heretofore to have considered the issue, that lawyers who obtain, disclose, or use personal information solely to find clients to represent in an incipient lawsuit—as opposed to evidence for use in existing or potential litigation—may seek solace under the litigation exception of the Driver's Privacy Protection Act of 1994 ("DPPA"), 18 U.S.C. §§ 2721-2725. (2) Whether the Fourth Circuit erred in reaching the conclusion (in conflict with prior precedent) that a lawyer who files an action that effectively amounts to a "place holder" lawsuit may thereafter use DPPA-protected personal information to solicit plaintiffs for that action through a direct mail advertising campaign on the grounds that such use is "inextricably intertwined" with "use in litigation."

5. Alleyne v. United States*, No. 11-9335 (4th Cir., 457 F. App'x 348; cert. granted Oct. 5, 2012; argued on Jan. 14, 2013). Whether the Court should overrule its decision in Harris v. United States, 536 U.S. 545 (2002), in which it held that the Constitution does not require facts which increase a mandatory minimum sentence to be determined by a jury.

6. Koontz v. St. Johns River Water Management*, No. 11-1447 (Fl., 77 So.3d 1220; cert. granted Oct. 5, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting respondent; argued on Jan. 15, 2013). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether the Government can be held liable for a taking when it refuses to issue a land-use permit on the sole basis that the permit applicant did not accede to a permit condition that, if applied, would violate the essential nexus and rough proportionality tests set out in Nollan v. California Coastal Commission, 483 U.S. 825 (1987), and Dolan v. City of Tigard, 512 U.S. 374 (1994). (2) Whether the nexus and proportionality tests set out in Nollan and Dolan apply to a land-use exaction that takes the form of a government demand that a permit applicant dedicate money, services, labor, or any other type of personal property to a public use.

7. McQuiggin v. Perkins*, No. 12-126 (6th Cir., 670 F.3d 665; cert. granted Oct. 29, 2012; argued on Feb. 25, 2013). Whether, under the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996, there is an actual-innocence exception to the requirement that a petitioner show an extraordinary circumstance that "prevented timely filing" of a habeas petition, and if so, whether there is an additional actual-innocence exception to the requirement that a petitioner demonstrate that "he has been pursuing his rights diligently."

8. Trevino v. Thaler*, No. 11-10189 (5th Cir., 449 F. App'x 415; cert. granted Oct. 29, 2012, limited to Question One; argued on Feb. 25, 2013). In federal habeas proceedings, undersigned counsel raised for the first time a claim under Wiggins v. Smith, 539 U.S. 510 (2003), that trial counsel were ineffective for failing to investigate the extraordinary mitigating evidence in Mr. Trevino's life. The federal proceeding was stayed to allow exhaustion, but the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals dismissed Mr. Trevino's Wiggins claim under state abuse of the writ rules. Thereafter, the federal district court dismissed the claim as procedurally barred, finding no cause for the default. On appeal, Mr. Trevino argued that the Court of Appeals should stay further proceedings until this Court resolved the question then-pending in several cases whether ineffective assistance of state habeas counsel in failing to raise a meritorious claim of ineffective assistance of trial counsel established cause for the default in state habeas proceedings. The Court of Appeals refused to stay Mr. Trevino's appeal for this purpose. Four months later, this Court decided in Martinez v. Ryan, 132 S. Ct. 1309 (March 20, 2012), that ineffective assistance of state habeas counsel in the very circumstance presented by Mr. Trevino's case could establish cause for the default of a claim of ineffective assistance of trial counsel. The Question Presented is whether the Court should grant certiorari, vacate the Court of Appeals opinion, and remand to the Court of Appeals for consideration of Mr. Trevino's argument under Martinez v. Ryan.

9. Peugh v. United States*, No. 12-62 (7th Cir., 675 F.3d 736; cert. granted Nov. 9, 2012; argued on Feb. 26, 2013). Whether a sentencing court violates the Ex Post Facto Clause by using the U.S. Sentencing Guidelines in effect at the time of sentencing rather than the Guidelines in effect at the time of the offense, if the newer Guidelines create a significant risk that the defendant will receive a longer sentence.

10. Maryland v. King*, No. 12-207 (Md., 425 Md. 550; cert. granted Nov. 9, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting petitioner; argued on Feb. 26, 2013). Whether the Fourth Amendment allows the states to collect and analyze DNA from people arrested and charged with serious crimes.

Gibson Dunn – Counsel for Amicus Curiae Global Alliance for Rapid DNA Testing

11. Shelby County v. Holder*, No. 12-96 (D.C. Cir., 679 F.3d 848; cert. granted Nov. 9, 2012; argued on Feb. 27, 2013). Whether Congress's decision in 2006 to reauthorize Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act under the pre-existing coverage formula of Section 4(b) of the Voting Rights Act exceeded its authority under the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments and thus violated the Tenth Amendment and Article IV of the United States Constitution.

12. American Express Co. v. Italian Colors Restaurant*, No. 12-133 (2d Cir., 667 F.3d 204; cert. granted Nov. 9, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting respondents; argued on Feb. 27, 2013). Whether the Federal Arbitration Act permits courts, invoking the "federal substantive law of arbitrability," to invalidate arbitration agreements on the ground that they do not permit class arbitration of a federal-law claim.

13. Arizona v. Inter Tribal Council of Arizona, Inc.*, No. 12-71 (9th Cir., 667 F.3d 383; cert. granted Oct. 15, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting respondents; argued on Mar. 18, 2013). Whether the court of appeals erred in (1) creating a new, heightened preemption test under Article I, Section 4, Clause 1 of the U.S. Constitution that is contrary to this Court's authority and conflicts with other circuit court decisions, and (2) holding that under that test the National Voter Registration Act preempts an Arizona law that requests persons who are registering to vote to show evidence that they are eligible to vote.

14. Mutual Pharmaceutical Co. v. Bartlett*, No. 12-142 (1st Cir., 678 F.3d 30; cert. granted Nov. 30, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting petitioner; argued on Mar. 19, 2013). Whether the First Circuit erred when it created a circuit split and held—in clear conflict with the Court's decision in PLIVA, Inc. v. Mensing, 131 S. Ct. 2567 (2011); Riegel v. Medtronic, Inc., 552 U.S. 312 (2008); and Cipolline v. Liggett Group, Inc., 505 U.S. 504 (1992)—that federal law does not preempt state law design-defect claims targeting generic pharmaceutical products because the conceded conflict between such claims and the federal laws governing generic pharmaceutical design allegedly can be avoided if the makers of generic pharmaceuticals simply stop making their products.

15. Horne v. Department of Agriculture*, No. 12-123 (9th Cir., 673 F.3d 1071; cert. granted Nov. 20, 2012; argued on Mar. 20, 2013). Under federal regulations, a "handler" of raisins must turn over a percentage of his raisin crop to a federal entity in order to sell the remainder on the open market—often in exchange for no payment or payment below the cost of raisin production. The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether the Ninth Circuit erred in holding, contrary to the decisions of five other circuit courts, that a party may not raise the Takings Clause as a defense to a "direct transfer of funds mandated by the Government," Eastern Enterprises v. Apfel, 524 U.S. 498, 521 (1998) (plurality), but instead must pay the money and then bring a separate, later claim requesting reimbursement of the money under the Tucker Act in the Court of Federal Claims; and (2) Whether the Ninth Circuit erred in holding, contrary to a decision of the Federal Circuit, that it lacked jurisdiction over petitioners' takings defense, even though petitioners, as "handlers" of raisins under the Raisin Marketing Order, are statutorily required under 7 U.S.C. § 608c(15) to exhaust all claims and defenses in administrative proceedings before the United States Department of Agriculture, with exclusive jurisdiction for review in federal district court.

16. Oxford Health Plans, LLV v. Sutter*, No. 12-135 (3d Cir., 675 F.3d 215; cert. granted Dec. 7, 2012; argued on Mar. 25, 2013). Whether an arbitrator acts within his powers under the Federal Arbitration Act (as the Second and Third Circuits have held) or exceeds those powers (as the Fifth Circuit has held) by determining that parties affirmatively "agreed to authorize class arbitration," Stolt-Nielsen S.A. v. Animalfeeds Int'l Corp., 130 S. Ct. 1758, 1776 (2010), based solely on their use of broad contractual language precluding litigation and requiring arbitration of any dispute arising under their contract.

17. Federal Trade Commission v. Watson Pharmaceuticals*, No. 12-416 (11th Cir., 677 F.3d 1298; cert. granted Dec. 7, 2012; argued on Mar. 25, 2013). Whether reverse-payment agreements are per se lawful unless the underlying patent litigation was a sham or the patent was obtained by fraud (as the court below held), or instead are presumptively anticompetitive and unlawful (as the Third Circuit has held).

Gibson Dunn – Counsel for Respondents

18. Hollingsworth v. Perry*, No. 12-144 (9th Cir., 671 F.3d 1052; cert. granted Dec. 7, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting respondents; argued on Mar. 26, 2013). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment prohibits the State of California from defining marriage as the union of a man and a woman; and (2) whether petitioners have standing under Article III, § 2 of the Constitution in this case.

19. United States v. Windsor*, No. 12-307 (2d Cir., 699 F.3d 169; cert. granted Dec. 7, 2012; argued on Mar. 27, 2013). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether Section 3 of the Defense of Marriage Act (DOMA) violates the Fifth Amendment's guarantee of equal protection of the laws as applied to persons of the same sex who are legally married under the laws of their State; (2) whether the Executive Branch's agreement with the court below that DOMA is unconstitutional deprives this Court of jurisdiction to decide this case; and (3) whether the Bipartisan Legal Advisory Group of the United States House of Representatives has Article III standing in this case.

Gibson Dunn – Counsel for Amicus Curiae CLS Bank International

20. Association for Molecular Pathology v. Myriad Genetics, Inc.*, No. 12-398 (Fed. Cir., 689 F.3d 1303; cert. granted Nov. 30, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting neither party; argued on Apr. 15, 2013). The Questions Presented are: (1) Are human genes patentable; (2) Did the Federal Circuit err in upholding a method claim by Myriad that is irreconcilable with this Court's ruling in Mayo Collaborative Servs. v. Prometheus Labs., Inc., 132 S. Ct. 1289 (2012); and (3) Did the Federal Circuit err in adopting a new and inflexible rule, contrary to normal standing rules, and the Supreme Court's decision in MedImmune, Inc. v. Genentech, Inc., 549 U.S. 118 (2007), that petitioners who have been indisputably deterred by Myriad's "active enforcement" of its patent rights nonetheless lack standing to challenge those patents absent evidence that they have been personally threatened with an infringement action.

21. United States v. Davila*, No. 12-167 (11th Cir., 664 F.3d 1355; cert. granted Jan. 4, 2013; argued on Apr. 15, 2013). Whether the court of appeals erred in holding that any degree of judicial participation in plea negotiations, in violation of Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 11(c)(1), automatically requires vacatur of a defendant's guilty plea, irrespective of whether the error prejudiced the defendant.

22. Adoptive Couple v. Baby Girl*, No. 12-399 (S.C., 731 S.E.2d 550; cert. granted Jan. 4, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting affirmance; argued on Apr. 16, 2013). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether a non-custodial parent can invoke the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA), which applies to state custody proceedings involving an Indian child, to block an adoption voluntarily and lawfully initiated by a non-Indian parent under state law. (2) Whether ICWA defines "parent" in 25 U.S.C. § 1903(9) to include an unwed biological father who has not complied with state law rules to attain legal status as a parent.

23. American Trucking Association, Inc. v. Los Angeles*, No. 11-798 (9th Cir., 660 F.3d 384; CVSG Mar. 26, 2012; cert. opposed Nov. 30, 2012; cert. granted Jan. 11, 2013 limited to Questions 1 and 3; SG as amicus, supporting reversal; argued on Apr. 16, 2013). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether 49 U.S.C. § 14501(c)(1), which provides that "a State [or] political subdivision . . . may not enact or enforce a law, regulation, or other provision having the force and effect of law related to a price, route, or service of any motor carrier . . . with respect to the transportation of property," contains an unexpressed "market participant" exception and permits a municipal governmental entity to take action that conflicts with the express preemption clause, occurs in a market in which the municipal entity does not participate, and is unconnected with any interest in the efficient procurement of services. (3) Whether permitting a municipal governmental entity to bar federally licensed motor carriers from access to a port operates as a partial suspension of the motor carriers' federal registration, in violation of Castle v. Hayes Freight Lines Inc., 348 U.S. 61 (1954).

24. Hillman v. Maretta*, No. 11-1221 (Va., 722 S.E.2d 32; CVSG June 18, 2012; cert. supported Dec. 14, 2012; cert. granted Jan. 11, 2013; SG as amicus, supporting respondent; argued on Apr. 22, 2013). Whether 5 U.S.C. § 8705(a), any other provision of the Federal Employees Group Life Insurance Act of 1954 ("FEGLIA"), or any regulation promulgated thereunder preempts a state domestic relations equitable remedy which creates a cause of action against the recipient of FEGLIA insurance proceeds after they have been distributed.

25. Agency for International Development v. Alliance for Open Society International, Inc.*, No. 12-10 (2d Cir., 651 F.3d 218; cert. granted Jan. 11, 2013; argued on Apr. 22, 2013). Whether the United States Leadership Against HIV/AIDS, Tuberculosis, and Malaria Act of 2003, 22 U.S.C. § 7632(f), which requires an organization to have a policy explicitly opposing prostitution and sex trafficking in order to receive federal funding to provide HIV and AIDS programs overseas, violates the First Amendment.

26. Salinas v. Texas*, No. 12-246 (Tex. Crim. App., 369 S.W.3d 176; cert. granted Jan. 11, 2013; SG as amicus, supporting respondent; argued on Apr. 17, 2013). Whether or under what circumstances the Fifth Amendment's Self-Incrimination Clause protects a defendant's refusal to answer law enforcement questioning before he has been arrested or read his Miranda rights.

27. United States v. Kebodeaux*, No. 12-418 (5th Cir. 687 F.3d 232; cert. granted Jan. 11, 2013; argued on Apr. 17, 2013). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether the court of appeals erred in conducting its constitutional analysis on the premises that respondent was not under a federal registration obligation until the Sex Offender Registration and Notification Act (SORNA) was enacted, when pre-SORNA federal law obligated him to register as a sex offender. (2) Whether the court of appeals erred in holding that Congress lacks the Article I authority to provide for criminal penalties under 18 U.S.C. § 2250(a)(2)(A) for failing to register as a sex offender, as applied to a person who was convicted of a sex offense under federal law and completed his criminal sentence before SORNA was enacted.

28. Sekhar v. United States*, No. 12-357 (2d Cir., 683 F.3d 436; cert. granted Jan. 11, 2013; argued on Apr. 23, 2013). Whether the "recommendation" of an attorney, who is a salaried employee of a governmental agency, in a single instance, is intangible property that can be the subject of an extortion attempt under 18 U.S.C. § 1951(a) (the Hobbs Act) and 18 U.S.C. § 875(d).

29. Tarrant Regional Water District v. Herrmann*, No. 11-889 (10th Cir., 656 F.3d 1222; CVSG Apr. 2, 2012; cert. supported Nov. 30, 2012; cert. granted Jan. 4, 2013; SG as amicus, supporting vacatur and remand; argued on Apr. 23, 2013). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether Congress's approval of an interstate water compact that grants the contracting states "equal rights" to certain surface water and – using language present in almost all such compacts – provides that the compact shall not "be deemed . . . to interfere" with each state's "appropriation, use, and control of water . . . not inconsistent with its obligations under this Compact," manifests unmistakably clear congressional consent to state laws that expressly burden interstate commerce in water. (2) Whether a provision of a congressionally approved multi-state compact that is designed to ensure an equal share of water among the contracting states preempts protectionist state laws that obstruct other states from accessing the water to which they are entitled by the compact.

30. University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center v. Nassar*, No. 12-484 (5th Cir., 674 F.3d 448; cert. granted Jan. 18, 2013; SG as amicus, supporting respondent; argued on Apr. 24, 2013). Whether Title VII's retaliation provision and similarly worded statutes require a plaintiff to prove but-for causation (i.e., that an employer would not have taken an adverse employment action but for an improper motive), or instead require only proof that the employer had a mixed motive (i.e., that an improper motive was one of multiple reasons for the employment action).

October 2013 Term

1. Chadbourne & Parke LLP v. Troice*, No. 12-79; Willis of Colorado Inc. v. Troice, No. 12-86; Proskauer Rose LLP v. Troice, No. 12-88 (5th Cir., 675 F.3d 503; CVSG Oct. 1, 2012; cert. opposed Dec. 14, 2012; cert. granted Jan. 18, 2013). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether the Securities Litigation Uniform Standards Act of 1998 ("SLUSA"), 15 U.S.C. §§ 77p(b), 78bb(f)(1), prohibits private class actions based on state law only where the alleged purchase or sale of a covered security is "more than tangentially related" to the "heart, crux or gravamen" of the alleged fraud. (2) Whether the SLUSA precludes a class action in which the defendant is sued for aiding and abetting fraud, but a non-party, rather than the defendant, made the only alleged misrepresentation in connection with a covered securities transaction.

2. Bond v. United States*, No. 12-158 (3d Cir., 681 F.3d 149; cert. granted Jan. 18, 2013). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether the Constitution's structural limits on federal authority impose any constraints on the scope of Congress' authority to enact legislation to implement a valid treaty, at least in circumstances where the federal statute, as applied, goes far beyond the scope of the treaty, intrudes on traditional state prerogatives, and is concededly unnecessary to satisfy the Government's treaty obligations? (2) Can the provisions of the Chemical Weapons Convention Implementation Act, 18 U.S.C. § 229, be interpreted not to reach ordinary poisoning cases, which have been handled by state and local authorities since the Framing, in order to avoid the difficult constitutional questions involving the scope of and continuing validity of the Court's decision in Missouri v. Holland?

3. Sandifer v. United States Steel Corp.*, No. 12-417 (7th Cir., 678 F.3d 590; cert. granted Feb. 19, 2013; limited to Question 1). Under the Fair Labor Standards Act, the period of time during which a covered employee must be paid begins when the worker engages in a principal activity. Under 29 U.S.C. § 203(o) of the Act, however, an employer need not compensate worker for time spent "changing clothes" if that time is expressly excluded from compensable time under a bona fide collective bargaining agreement applicable to that worker. Does donning and doffing safety gear constitute "changing clothes" within the meaning of § 203(o)?

4. McCutcheon v. Federal Election Commission*, No. 12-536 (D.D.C., 2012 WL 4466482; cert. granted Feb. 19, 2013). Federal law imposes two types of limits on individual political contributions: Base limits restrict the amount an individual may contribute to a candidate committee ($2,500 per election), a national-party committee ($30,800 per calendar year), a state, local, and district party committee (combined $10,000 per calendar year), and a political-action committee ($5,000 per calendar year). 2 U.S.C. § 441a(a(1), Biennial limits restrict the aggregate amount an individual may contribute biennially to candidate committees ($46,200) and all other committees ($70,800). 2 U.S.C. § 441a(a)(3). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether the biennial limit on contributions to non-candidate committees is unconstitutional for lacking a constitutionally cognizable interest as applied to contributions to national-party committees. (2) Whether the biennial limits on contributions to non-candidate committees are facially unconstitutional for lacking a constitutionally cognizable interest. (3) Whether the biennial limits on contributions to non-candidate committees are unconstitutionally too low, as applied and facially. (4) Whether the biennial limit on contributions to candidate committees is unconstitutional for lacking a constitutionally cognizable interest. (5) Whether the biennial limit on contributions to candidate committees is unconstitutionally too low.

5. Burt v. Titlow*, No. 12-414 (6th Cir., 680 F.3d 577; cert. granted Feb. 25, 2013). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether the Sixth Circuit failed to give appropriate deference to a Michigan state court under AEDPA in holding that defense counsel was constitutionally ineffective for allowing respondent to maintain his claim of innocence. (2) Whether a convicted defendant's subjective testimony that he would have accepted a plea but for ineffective assistance, is, standing alone, sufficient to demonstrate a reasonable probability that defendant would have accepted the plea. (3) Whether Lafler v. Cooper, 132 S. Ct. 1376 (2012), which expanded ineffective-assistance-of-counsel claims to include rejected plea offers, always requires a state trial court to resentence a defendant who shows a reasonable probability that he would have accepted a plea offer but for ineffective assistance, and to do so in such a way as to "remedy" the violation of the defendant's constitutional right.

6. Kansas v. Cheever*, No. 12-609 (Kan., 284 P.3d 1007; cert. granted Feb. 25, 2013; limited to Question 1). When a criminal defendant affirmatively introduces expert testimony that he lacked the requisite mental state to commit capital murder of a law enforcement officer due to the alleged temporary and long-term effects of the defendant's methamphetamine use, does the State violate the defendant's Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination by rebutting the defendant's mental state defense with evidence from a court-ordered mental evaluation of the defendant?

7. Walden v. Fiore*, No. 12-574 (9th Cir., 688 F.3d 558; cert. granted Mar. 4, 2013). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether due process permits a court to exercise personal jurisdiction over a defendant whose sole "contact" with the forum State is his knowledge that the plaintiff has connections to that State. (2) Whether the judicial district where the plaintiff suffered injury is a district "in which a substantial part of the events or omissions giving rise to the claim occurred" for purposes of establishing venue under 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b)(2) even if the defendant's alleged acts and omissions all occurred in another district.

8. Kaley v. United States*, No. 12-463 (11th Cir., 677 F.3d 1316; cert. granted Mar. 18, 2013). When a post-indictment, ex parte restraining order freezes assets needed by a criminal defendant to retain counsel of choice, do the Fifth and Sixth Amendments require a pretrial, adversarial hearing at which the defendant may challenge the evidentiary support and legal theory of the underlying charges?

9. U.S. Forest Service v. Pacific Rivers Council*, No. 12-623 (9th Cir., 689 F.3d 1012; cert. granted Mar. 18, 2013). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether respondent Pacific Rivers Council (PRC) has Article III standing to challenge the Forest Service's 2004 programmatic amendments to the forest plans governing management of 11 Sierra Nevada Forests when PRC failed to establish that any of its members was imminently threatened with cognizable harm because he or she would come into contact with any parcel of forest affected by the amendments. (2) Whether PRC's challenge to the Forest Service's programmatic amendments is ripe when PRC failed to identify any site-specific project authorized under the amended plan provisions to which PRC objects. (3) Whether the National Environmental Policy Act required the Forest Service, when adopting the programmatic amendments, to analyze every type of environmental effect that any project ultimately authorized under the amendments throughout the 11 affected forests might have if it was reasonably possible to do so when the programmatic amendments were adopted, even though any future site-specific project would require its own appropriate environmental analysis before going forward.

10. Madigan v. Levin*, No. 12-872 (7th Cir., 692 F.3d 607; cert. granted Mar. 18, 2013). Whether the Seventh Circuit erred in holding, in an acknowledged departure from the rule in at least four other circuits, that state and local government employees may avoid the Federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act's comprehensive remedial regime by bringing age discrimination claims directly under the Equal Protection Clause and 42 U.S.C. § 1983.

11. United States v. Woods*, No. 12-562 (5th Cir., 471 F. App'x 320; cert. granted Mar. 25, 2013). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether Section 6662 of the Internal Revenue Code, which prescribes a penalty for an underpayment of federal income tax that is "attributable to" an overstatement of basis in property, applies to an underpayment resulting from a determination that a transaction lacks economic substance because the sole purpose of the transaction was to generate a tax loss by artificially inflating the taxpayer's basis in property; and (2) Whether the district court had jurisdiction in this case under 26 U.S.C. § 6226 to consider the substantial valuation misstatement penalty.

12. Schuette v. Coalition to Defend Affirmative Action*, No. 12-682 (6th Cir. 652 F.3d 607; cert. granted Mar. 25, 2013). Whether a state violates the Equal Protection Clause by amending its constitution to prohibit race- and sex-based discrimination or preferential treatment in public-university admissions decisions.

13. Atlantic Marine Construction Co. v. United States District Court for the Western District of Texas*, No. 12-929 (5th Cir., 701 F.3d 736; cert. granted Apr. 1, 2013). Whether the Court's decision in Stewart Organization, Inc. v. Ricoh Corp., 487 U.S. 22 (1988), changed the standard for enforcement of forum-selection clauses that designate an alternative federal forum, limiting review of such clauses to a discretionary, balancing-of-conveniences analysis under 28 U.S.C. § 1404(a), and (2) If so, whether district courts should allocate the burdens of proof among parties seeking to enforce or to avoid a forum-selection clause.

14. Heimeshoff v. Hartford Life Insurance*, No. 12-729 (2d Cir., 496 F. App'x 129; cert. granted Apr. 15, 2013). The Question Presented is when a statute of limitations should accrue for judicial review of a disability adverse benefit determination under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act ("ERISA"), 29 U.S.C. § 1002 et seq.

15. Sprint Communications Co. v. Jacobs*, No. 12-815 (8th Cir., 690 F.3d 864; cert. granted Apr. 15, 2013). Whether the Eight Circuit erred by concluding, in conflict with decisions of nine other circuits and this Court, that Younger abstention is warranted not only when there is a related state proceeding that is "coercive" but also when there is a related state proceeding that is "remedial."

Gibson Dunn – Counsel for DaimlerChrysler AG

16. DaimlerChrysler AG v. Bauman*, No. 11-965 (9th Cir., 644 F.3d 909; cert. granted Apr. 22, 2013). Whether it violates due process for a court to exercise general personal jurisdiction over a foreign corporation based solely on the fact that an indirect corporate subsidiary performs services on behalf of the defendant in the forum State.

17. Burrage v. United States*, No. 12-7515 (8th Cir., 687 F.3d 1015; cert. granted Apr. 29, 2013). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether the crime of distribution of drugs causing death under 21 U.S.C. § 841 is a strict liability crime, without a foreseeability or proximate cause requirement; and (2) whether a person can be convicted for distribution of heroin causing death using jury instructions which allow a conviction when the heroin that was distributed "contributed to," death by "mixed drug intoxication," but was not the sole cause of death of a person.

18. Burnside v. Walters*, No. 12-7892 (6th Cir., Nos. 10-5790/6368 (unpublished); cert. granted May 13, 2013). Whether the Sixth Circuit erred in holding—in conflict with all eleven other federal circuit courts of appeals—that the in forma pauperis statute, 28 U.S.C. § 1915(e)(2), prohibits indigent plaintiffs from amending their complaints.

Gibson Dunn – Counsel for FMR, LLC

19. Lawson v. FMR, LLC*, No. 12-3 (1st Cir., 670 F.3d 61; CVSG Oct. 9, 2012; cert. opposed Apr. 9, 2013; cert. granted May 20, 2013). Whether an employee of a privately held contractor or subcontractor of a public company is protected from retaliation by Section 806 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act, 18 U.S.C. § 1514A.

20. Northwest, Inc. v. Ginsberg*, No. 12-462 (9th Cir., 695 F.3d 873; cert. granted May 20, 2013). Whether the Ninth Circuit erred in holding that respondent's implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing was not preempted under the Airline Deregulation Act because such claims are categorically unrelated to a price, route, or service, notwithstanding that respondent's claim arises out of a frequent-flyer program and manifestly enlarged the terms of the parties' undertakings, which allowed termination in Northwest's sole discretion.

Gibson Dunn – Counsel for Greece, New York

21. Greece, New York v. Galloway*, No. 12-696 (2d Cir., 681 F.3d 20; cert. granted May 20, 2013). Whether the Second Circuit erred in holding that a legislative prayer practice violates the Establishment Clause notwithstanding the absence of discrimination in the selection of prayer-givers or forbidden exploitation of the prayer opportunity.

22. Medtronic Inc. v. Boston Scientific Corp.*, No. 12-1128 (Fed. Cir.; 695 F.3d 1266; cert. granted May 20, 2013). Whether, in a declaratory judgment action brought by a licensee under MedImmune, Inc. v. Genentech, Inc., the licensee has the burden to prove that its products do not infringe the patent, or whether (as is the case in all other patent litigation, including other declaratory judgment actions), the patentee must prove infringement.

Cases Determined Without Argument

1. Tennant v. Jefferson County Commission*, No. 11-1184 (S.D. W.Va.; reversed and remanded Sept. 25, 2012). Per Curiam. On direct appeal from a three-judge district court, the Court held that West Virginia's 2011 congressional redistricting plan does not violate the "one person, one vote" principle embodied in Article I, § 2 of the United States Constitution. Because West Virginia conceded that it could have adopted a redistricting plan with lower population variations between congressional districts, the only question for the Court was whether West Virginia can demonstrate that the "population deviations in its plan were necessary to achieve some legitimate state objective." Karcher v. Daggett, 462 U.S. 725, 740 (1983). The Court held that West Virginia carried its burden. Unlike other proposed plans, the chosen redistricting plan avoided creating contests between incumbents, did not split political subdivisions, and minimized population shifts between districts. Accordingly, the Court reversed the district court's decision that West Virginia had not carried its burden.

2. Lefemine v. Wideman*, No. 12-168 (4th Cir.; vacated and remanded Nov. 5, 2012). Per curiam. In a lawsuit alleging that the conduct of government officials violates the U.S. Constitution, a plaintiff who obtains a permanent injunction but no money damages is a "prevailing party" for purposes of attorneys' fees under 42 U.S.C. § 1988. The permanent injunction ordered the officials to change their behavior in a manner that directly benefited the plaintiff. Accordingly, the plaintiff was entitled to receive his attorneys' fees unless special circumstances would render an award unjust.

3. Nitro-Lift Technologies, LLC v. Howard*, No. 11-1377 (Okla.; vacated and remanded Nov. 26, 2012). Per curiam. The Court held that the Oklahoma Supreme Court erred in preventing arbitration of a dispute over the scope of non-competition agreements in employment contracts. The employment contract at issue contained a valid arbitration clause requiring arbitration for "[a]ny dispute, difference or unresolved question between Nitro-Lift and the Employee." Nonetheless, the Oklahoma Supreme Court ruled that the arbitration clause and the Federal Arbitration Act, 9 U.S.C. § 1 et seq., did not inhibit its review of the underlying contract's validity, and the noncompetition clauses were void and unenforceable as against Oklahoma's public policy. The Supreme Court vacated the Oklahoma Supreme Court's decision, holding that it was bound by the FAA, which is "the supreme Law of the Land," and by the prior opinions of the U.S. Supreme Court interpreting the FAA as foreclosing "judicial hostility towards arbitration." Slip Op. at 5 (quoting AT&T Mobility LLC v. Concepcion, 563 U.S. __, __ (2011)).

4. Marshall v. Rodgers*, No. 12-382 (9th Cir.; reversed and remanded Apr. 1, 2013). Per curiam. The Question Presented was whether Faretta v. California, 422 U.S. 806, 807 (1975), which held that a defendant has a Sixth Amendment right to "proceed without counsel when he voluntarily and intelligently elects to do so, "clearly establish[es]," for purposes of habeas corpus review of state-court judgments under 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d), that a defendant retains a constitutional right to revoke his prior waiver of counsel at trial and require reappointment of counsel to file a new trial motion. The Court held that Faretta did not clearly establish that the right to counsel is retained following a waiver and that the Ninth Circuit erred when it held that a criminal defendant's Sixth Amendment right to effective assistance of counsel was violated where the California state courts declined to appoint an attorney to assist in filing a motion for a new trial following the defendant's three prior waivers of the right to counseled representation. The Court reasoned that the defendant's right to counsel in these circumstances was not clearly established by "Federal law, as determined by the Supreme Court of the United States," in light of his three prior waivers of his right to counsel. Slip Op. at 3-4 (citing 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(1)).

Pending Cases Calling For The Views Of The Solicitor General

1. Harris v. Quinn*, No. 11-681 (7th Cir., 656 F.3d 692; CVSG June 28, 2012). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether a state may, consistent with the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution, compel personal care providers to accept and financially support a private organization as their exclusive representative to petition the state for greater reimbursements from its Medicaid programs. (2) Whether the lower court erred in holding that the claims of providers in the Home Based Support Services Program are not ripe for judicial review.

2. Young v. Fitzpatrick*, No. 11-1485 (Wash. App., 262 P.3d 527; CVSG Oct. 1, 2012). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether police officers, employed by the Puyallup Indian Tribe, but trained, certified, and cross-commissioned by the state of Washington, and armed, equipped, and provisioned by the United States, are subject to the Constitution, U.S. civil rights laws, and state tort law. (2) Whether the Shelter or Conceal Clause of the Treaty of Medicine Creek, and additional sources of federal and state law, preempts any claims of qualified immunity by individual Puyallup tribal police officer defendants in a suit for violation of the Constitution, U.S. civil rights laws, and state tort law.

3. Mount Holly v. Mt. Holly Gardens Citizens in Action, Inc.*, No. 11-1507 (3d Cir., 658 F.3d 375; CVSG Oct. 29, 2012). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether disparate impact claims are cognizable under the Fair Housing Act. (2) Whether, if such claims are cognizable, they should be analyzed under the burden shifting approach used by three circuits, under the balancing test used by four circuits, under a hybrid approach used by two circuits, or by some other test: (a) what the correct test is for determining whether a prima facie case of disparate impact has been made; (b) how the statistical evidence should be evaluated; and (c) what the correct test is for determining when a defendant has satisfied its burden in a disparate impact case.

4. BG Group PLC v. Argentina*, No. 12-138 (D.C. Cir., 665 F.3d 1363; CVSG Nov. 5, 2012). Whether, in disputes involving a multi-staged dispute resolution process, a court or the arbitrator determines whether a precondition to arbitration has been satisfied.

5. Law v. Siegel*, No. 12-5196 (9th Cir., 2011 WL 2181386; CVSG Dec. 3, 2012). Whether the Ninth Circuit erred in allowing the bankruptcy trustee to surcharge the debtor's constitutionally protected homestead property.

6. Michigan Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs v. Gerstenschlager*, No. 12-379 (Mich. Ct. App., 771 N.W.2d 423; CVSG Jan. 7, 2013). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether the Trade Act of 1974 prescribes a deadline for a claimant seeking a training waiver as a prerequisite to obtaining benefits under the Act. (2) Whether a federal agency's operating instruction, which states are bound to follow by statutory agreement, is entitled to Chevron deference.

7. Air Wisconsin Airlines Corp. v. Hoeper*, No. 12-315 (Co., 2012 WL 907764; CVSG Jan. 7, 2013). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether a court can deny Aviation and Transportation Security Act (ATSA) immunity without deciding whether the airline's report was true. (2) Whether the First Amendment requires a reviewing court in a defamation case to make an independent examination of the record before affirming that a plaintiff met its burden of proving a statement was false.

8. Michigan v. Bay Mills Indian Community*, No. 12-515 (6th Cir., 695 F.3d 406; CVSG Jan. 7, 2013). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether a federal court has jurisdiction to enjoin activity that violates the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act (IGRA), 25 U.S.C. § 2701 et seq., but takes place outside of Indian lands. (2) Whether tribal sovereign immunity bars a state from suing in federal courts to enjoin a tribe from violating IGRA outside of Indian lands.

9. Pfizer Inc. v. Law Offices of Peter G. Angelos*, No. 12-300 (2d Cir., 676 F.3d 45; CVSG Jan. 14, 2013). Whether 11 U.S.C. § 524(g)(4)(A)(ii) of the Bankruptcy Code, which allows a bankruptcy court to bar certain suits against nondebtor third parties if the liability of those third parties is "by reason of" their taking an ownership interest or managerial involvement in the debtor, applies when the third party is an "apparent manufacturer."

10. Unite Here Local 355 v. Mulhall*, No. 12-99; Mulhall v. Unite Here Local 355, No. 12-312 (11th Cir., 668 F.3d 1211; CVSG Jan. 14, 2013). Whether organizing assistance offered by an employer to a union violates Section 302 of the Labor-Management Relations Act, 29 U.S.C. § 186(a)(2), which makes it unlawful for employers "to pay, lend, or deliver, or agree to pay, lend, or deliver, any money or other thing of value . . . to any labor organization."

11. Madison County v. Oneida Indian Nation of New York*, No. 12-604 (2d Cir., 665 F.3d 408; CVSG Feb. 19, 2013). Whether the 300,000-acre Oneida reservation in New York still exists, neither disestablished nor diminished, despite (1) the federal government's actions taken in furtherance of disestablishment, including the 1838 Treaty of Buffalo Creek, which covered land sales of tribal reservations under the U.S. Indian Removal program); (2) the Court's holding in City of Sherrill v. Oneida Indian Nation of New York, 125 S. Ct. 1478 (2005), that the Oneida Indian Nation of New York cannot exercise sovereignty over lands it purchases in the ancient reservation area; and (3) the Court's finding in that case that land in the ancient reservation area has not been treated as an Indian reservation by the federal, state, or local governments for nearly two centuries.

12. Lozano v. Alvarez*, No. 12-820 (2d Cir., 697 F.3d 41; CVSG Mar. 18, 2013). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether a district court considering a petition under the Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction for the return of an abducted child may equitably toll the running of the one-year filing period when the abducting parent has concealed the whereabouts of the child from the left-behind parent. (2) Whether an abducted child can be "settled" in the United States, within the meaning of Article 12 of the Convention, where it is undisputed that both the abducting parent and the child are residing illegally in the United States, and the abducting parent presents no evidence of a legitimate pending application or basis under existing law for seeking a change in their immigration status.

13. Fifth Third Bancorp v. Dudenhoeffer*, No. 12-751 (6th Cir., 692 F.3d 410; CVSG Mar. 25, 2013). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether the Sixth Circuit erred by holding that respondents were not required to plausibly allege in their complaint that the fiduciaries of an employee stock ownership plan abused their discretion by remaining invested in employer stock, in order to overcome the presumption that their decision to invest in employer stock was reasonable, as required by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, 29 U.S.C. §§ 1101 et seq. ("ERISA"), and every other circuit to address the issue; and (2) whether the Sixth Circuit erred by refusing to follow precedent of this Court (and the holdings of every other circuit to address the issue) by holding that filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission become actionable ERISA fiduciary communications merely by virtue of their incorporation by reference into plan documents.

14. Pom Wonderful LLC v. The Coca-Cola Co.*, No. 12-761 (9th Cir., 679 F.3d 1170; CVSG Mar. 25, 2013). Whether the court of appeals erred in holding that a private party cannot bring a Lanham Act claim, 15 U.S.C. §§ 1051 et seq., challenging a product label regulated under the Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, 21 U.S.C. §§ 301 et seq.

Gibson Dunn – Counsel for NML Capital, Ltd.

15. Argentina v. NML Capital, Ltd.*, No. 12-842 (2d Cir., 695 F.3d 201; CVSG Apr. 15, 2013). Whether post-judgment discovery in aid of enforcing a judgment against a foreign state can be ordered with respect to all assets of a foreign state regardless of their location or use, as held by the Second Circuit, or is limited to assets located in the United States that are potentially subject to execution under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act of 1976 ("FSIA"), 28 U.S.C. § 1602 et seq., as held by the Seventh, Fifth, and Ninth Circuits.

16. Sony Computer Entertainment v. 1st Media, LLC*, No. 12-1086 (Fed. Cir., 694 F.3d 1367; CVSG May 13, 2013). Whether the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit erred in restricting district courts' equitable discretion in evaluating patent unenforceability, contrary to this Court's precedent in Keystone Driller Co. v. General Excavator Co., 290 U.S. 240 (1933), Hazel Atlas Glass Co. v. Hartford-Empire Co., 322 U.S. 238 (1944), and Precision Instrument Manufacturing Co. v. Automotive Maintenance Machinery Co., 324 U.S. 806 (1945), by applying a rigid test that (a) forecloses district courts from considering the entire circumstantial record; and (b) precludes district courts from granting equitable remedies where a patent applicant has violated the Patent and Trademark Office's duty of candor.

CVSG Cases In Which The Solicitor General Supported Certiorari

1. Tarrant Regional Water District v. Herrmann*, No. 11-889 (10th Cir., 656 F.3d 1222; CVSG Apr. 2, 2012; cert. supported Nov. 30, 2012; cert. granted Jan. 4, 2013; argued on Apr. 23, 2013). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether Congress's approval of an interstate water compact that grants the contracting states "equal rights" to certain surface water and – using language present in almost all such compacts – provides that the compact shall not "be deemed . . . to interfere" with each state's "appropriation, use, and control of water . . . not inconsistent with its obligations under this Compact," manifests unmistakably clear congressional consent to state laws that expressly burden interstate commerce in water. (2) Whether a provision of a congressionally approved multi-state compact that is designed to ensure an equal share of water among the contracting states preempts protectionist state laws that obstruct other states from accessing the water to which they are entitled by the compact.

2. Hillman v. Maretta*, No. 11-1221 (Va., 722 S.E.2d 32; CVSG June 18, 2012; cert. supported Dec. 14, 2012; cert. granted Jan. 11, 2013; argued on Apr. 22, 2013). Whether 5 U.S.C. § 8705(a), any other provision of the Federal Employees Group Life Insurance Act of 1954 ("FEGLIA"), or any regulation promulgated thereunder preempts a state domestic relations equitable remedy which creates a cause of action against the recipient of FEGLI insurance proceeds after they have been distributed.

CVSG Cases In Which The Solicitor General Opposed Certiorari

1. Ryan v. Gonzales*, No. 10-930 (9th Cir., 623 F.3d 1242; CVSG May 31, 2011; cert. opposed Feb. 9, 2012; cert. granted Mar. 19, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting petitioners; argued on Oct. 9, 2012). Whether 18 U.S.C. § 3599(a)(2), which provides that an indigent capital state inmate pursuing federal habeas relief "shall be entitled to the appointment of one or more attorneys," entitles a death row inmate to stay the federal habeas proceedings he initiated if he is not competent to assist counsel.

   Decided Jan. 8, 2013 (568 U.S. __). Ninth Circuit/Reversed. Justice Thomas for a unanimous Court. Decided with Tibbals v. Carter, No. 11-218. The Court held that state prisoners adjudged incompetent have no statutory right to a stay of their federal habeas corpus proceedings. The Ninth Circuit and the Sixth Circuit, citing different federal statutes, had both concluded that death row inmates are entitled to a suspension of their federal habeas proceedings when found incompetent. The Supreme Court reversed both courts. Specifically, the Court held that its prior decision in Rees v. Peyton, 384 U.S. 312 (1966) (per curiam), did not recognize a statutory right to competence in federal habeas proceedings. The Court also held that 18 U.S.C. § 3599, which guarantees a right to federally funded counsel, does not provide a state prisoner with the right to suspend his federal habeas proceedings when he is adjudged incompetent. The Court reasoned that the assertion of such a right lacked any basis in the provision's text and would be difficult to square with the Court's constitutional precedents. The Court went on to note that given the backward-looking, record-based nature of habeas proceedings, counsel can generally provide effective representation to a habeas petitioner regardless of the petitioner's competence. After rejecting 18 U.S.C. § 3599 as a statutory basis for the right to competence in habeas proceedings, the Court also held that 18 U.S.C. § 4241 does not include a right to competence in habeas proceedings because it is inapplicable to habeas proceedings on its face, applying only to federal defendants and to trial proceedings prior to sentencing and at any time after the commencement of probation or supervised release. Finally, the Court held that where competence is questioned and the prisoner's claims could potentially benefit from his or her assistance, a district court should "take into account the likelihood that the petitioner will regain competence in the foreseeable future" and should not issue an indefinite stay that would "merely frustrate[] the State's attempts to defend its presumptively valid judgment."

2. Los Angeles County Flood Control v. Natural Resources*, No. 11-460 (9th Cir., 673 F.3d 880; cert. granted June 25, 2012; limited to Question 2; SG as amicus, supporting neither party; argued on Dec. 4, 2012). In South Florida Water Management District v. Miccosukee Tribe of Indians, 541 U.S. 95, 105 (2004), the Supreme Court held that transfer of water within a single body of water cannot constitute a "discharge" for purposes of the Clean Water Act. The question presented is whether when water flows from one portion of a river that is navigable water of the United States into a lower portion of the same river, through a concrete channel or other engineered improvement in the river constructed for flood and stormwater control as part of a municipal separate storm sewer system, there can be a "discharge" from an "outfall" under the Clean Water Act.

   Decided Jan. 8, 2013 (568 U.S. __). Ninth Circuit/Reversed and remanded. Justice Ginsburg for a unanimous Court (Alito, J., concurring in the judgment only). The Court held that the flow of water from an improved portion of a navigable waterway into an unimproved portion of the same waterway does not qualify as a "discharge of a pollutant" under the Clean Water Act. The district court found that the record was insufficient to warrant a finding that petitioner's "municipal separate storm sewer systems," concrete channels within the Los Angeles and San Gabriel Rivers, had discharged pollutants into the rivers. The Ninth Circuit reversed, holding that a discharge had occurred when polluted water detected in the improved portion of the waterways flowed downstream into the unimproved portions of the same waterways. In keeping with the Court's holding in South Florida Water Management District v. Miccosukee Tribe, 541 U.S. 95, 109-112 (2004), where it held that the transfer of polluted water between "two parts of the same water body" is not a discharge, the Court reversed. Because of its prior holding in Miccosukee, the Court noted that it was "hardly surprising" that both parties and the United States as amicus curiae agreed that the flow of polluted water from one portion of a river, through a concrete channel, and then into a lower portion of the same river does not constitute a "discharge." In Miccosukee, polluted water was removed from and then returned to the same water body; here, the Court reasoned, polluted water simply flowed "from one portion of the water body to another." Unless the transfer of polluted water is between "meaningfully distinct water bodies," as the Court explained in Miccosukee, it does not qualify as a "discharge" under the Clean Water Act.

3. Decker v. Northwest Envtl. Defense Ctr.*, No. 11-338 (9th Cir., 640 F.3d 1063; cert. granted June 25, 2012, case consolidated with Georgia-Pacific West v. Northwest Envtl. Defense Ctr., No. 11-347; SG as amicus, supporting petitioners; argued on Dec. 3, 2012). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether the Ninth Circuit erred when, in conflict with other circuits, it held that a citizen may bypass judicial review of a National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System ("NPDES") permitting rule under 33 U.S.C. § 1369, and may instead challenge the validity of the rule in a citizen suit to enforce the Clean Water Act ("CWA"). (2) Whether the Ninth Circuit erred when it held that stormwater from logging roads is industrial stormwater under the CWA and EPA's rules, even though EPA has determined that it is not industrial stormwater.

   Decided Mar. 20, 2013 (568 U.S. __). Ninth Circuit/Reversed and remanded. Justice Kennedy for a 7-1 Court (Roberts, C.J., concurring in part, joined by Alito, J.; Scalia, J., dissenting and concurring in part). The Court held that the Environmental Protection Agency's interpretation of its Industrial Stormwater Rule—a regulation implementing the Clean Water Act that EPA has since amended—was reasonable and must be accorded deference under Auer v. Robbins, 519 U.S. 452 (1997). At issue was whether the EPA had reasonably determined that, under its rule, a permit is not required "before channeled stormwater runoff from logging roads can be discharged into the navigable waters of the United States." Reiterating the "well established" rule "that an agency's interpretation need not be the only possible reading of a regulation—or even the best one—to prevail," the Court held that the EPA's interpretation of the Industrial Stormwater Rule was a permissible one, both because the regulation's language "leave[s] open the rational interpretation" reached by the EPA, and because "there is no indication that [EPA's] current view is a change from prior practice or a post hoc justification adopted in response to litigation." Additionally, the Court concluded that even though the EPA had since amended its Rule, the case nonetheless presented "a live controversy … regarding whether petitioners may be held liable for unlawful discharges under the earlier version of the Industrial Stormwater Rule." And the Court determined that because the case was a "citizen suit" designed "not to challenge [a regulation] but to enforce it under a proper interpretation," the suit did not fall under the "exclusive jurisdiction mandate" of 33 U.S.C. § 1369(b), which requires that an application for review be lodged in the court of appeals within 120 days of the EPA administrator's action.

4. Georgia-Pacific West v. Northwest Environmental Defense Center*, No. 11-347 (9th Cir., 640 F.3d 1063; CVSG Dec. 12, 2011; cert. opposed May 24, 2012; cert. granted June 25, 2012, consolidated with No. 11-338; argued on Dec. 3, 2012). Since passage of the Clean Water Act, the Environmental Protection Agency has considered runoff of rain from forest roads—whether channeled or not—to fall outside the scope of its National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System ("NPDES") and thus not to require a permit as a point source discharge of pollutants. Under a rule first promulgated in 1976, EPA consistently has defined as nonpoint source activities forest road construction and maintenance from which natural runoff results. And in regulating stormwater discharges under 1987 amendments to the Act, EPA again expressly excluded runoff from forest roads. In consequence, forest road runoff long has been regulated as a nonpoint source using best management practices, like those imposed by the State of Oregon on the roads at issue here. EPA's consistent interpretation of more than 35 years has survived proposed regulatory revision and legal challenge, and repeatedly has been endorsed by the United States in briefs and agency publications. The Ninth Circuit—in conflict with other circuits, contrary to the position of the United States as amicus, and with no deference to EPA—rejected EPA's longstanding interpretation. Instead, it directed EPA to regulate channeled forest road runoff under a statutory category of stormwater discharges "associated with industrial activity," for which a permit is required. The Question Presented is: Whether the Ninth Circuit should have deferred to EPA's longstanding position that channeled runoff from forest roads does not require a permit, and erred when it mandated that EPA regulate such runoff as industrial stormwater subject to NPDES.

   Decided Mar. 20, 2013 (568 U.S. __). Ninth Circuit/Reversed and remanded. Justice Kennedy for an 8-0 Court (Roberts, C.J., concurring in part, joined by Alito, J.; Scalia, J., dissenting and concurring in part). Decided with Decker v. Northwest Envtl. Defense Ctr., No. 11-338. The Court held that the Environmental Protection Agency's interpretation of its Industrial Stormwater Rule—a regulation implementing the Clean Water Act that EPA has since amended—was reasonable and must be accorded deference under Auer v. Robbins, 519 U.S. 452 (1997). At issue was whether the EPA had reasonably determined that, under its rule, a permit is not required "before channeled stormwater runoff from logging roads can be discharged into the navigable waters of the United States." Reiterating the "well established" rule "that an agency's interpretation need not be the only possible reading of a regulation—or even the best one—to prevail," the Court held that the EPA's interpretation of the Industrial Stormwater Rule was a permissible one, both because the regulation's language "leave[s] open the rational interpretation" reached by the EPA, and because "there is no indication that [EPA's] current view is a change from prior practice or a post hoc justification adopted in response to litigation." Additionally, the Court concluded that even though the EPA had since amended its Rule, the case nonetheless presented "a live controversy … regarding whether petitioners may be held liable for unlawful discharges under the earlier version of the Industrial Stormwater Rule." And the Court determined that because the case was a "citizen suit" designed "not to challenge [a regulation] but to enforce it under a proper interpretation," the suit did not fall under the "exclusive jurisdiction mandate" of 33 U.S.C. § 1369(b), which requires that an application for review be lodged in the court of appeals within 120 days of the EPA administrator's action.

5. Vance v. Ball State University*, No. 11-556 (7th Cir., 646 F.3d 461; CVSG Feb. 21, 2012; cert. opposed May 24, 2012; cert. granted June 25, 2012; SG as amicus, supporting neither party; argued on Nov. 26, 2012). In Faragher v. City of Boca Raton, 524 U.S. 775 (1998), and Burlington Industries, Inc. v. Ellerth, 524 U.S. 742 (1998), this Court held that under Title VII, an employer is vicariously liable for severe or pervasive workplace harassment by a supervisor of the victim. If the harasser was the victim's co-employee, however, the employer is not liable absent proof of negligence. In the decision below, the Seventh Circuit held that actionable harassment by a person whom the employer deemed a "supervisor" and who had the authority to direct and oversee the victim's daily work could not give rise to vicarious liability because the harasser did not also have the power to take formal employment actions against her. The Question Presented is whether, as the Second, Fourth, and Ninth Circuits have held, the Faragher and Ellerth "supervisor" liability rule (i) applies to harassment by those whom the employer vests with authority to direct and oversee their victim's daily work, or, as the First, Seventh, and Eighth Circuits have held (ii) is limited to those harassers who have the power to "hire, fire, demote, promote, transfer, or discipline" their victim.

6. American Trucking Association, Inc. v. Los Angeles*, No. 11-798 (9th Cir., 660 F.3d 384; CVSG Mar. 26, 2012; cert. opposed Nov. 30, 2012; cert. granted Jan. 11, 2013 limited to Questions 1 and 3; argued on Apr. 16, 2013). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether 49 U.S.C. § 14501(c)(1), which provides that "a State [or] political subdivision . . . may not enact or enforce a law, regulation, or other provision having the force and effect of law related to a price, route, or service of any motor carrier . . . with respect to the transportation of property," contains an unexpressed "market participant" exception and permits a municipal governmental entity to take action that conflicts with the express preemption clause, occurs in a market in which the municipal entity does not participate, and is unconnected with any interest in the efficient procurement of services. (3) Whether permitting a municipal governmental entity to bar federally licensed motor carriers from access to a port operates as a partial suspension of the motor carriers' federal registration, in violation of Castle v. Hayes Freight Lines Inc., 348 U.S. 61 (1954).

7. Blue Cross and Blue Shield v. Fossen*, No. 11-1155 (9th Cir., 660 F.3d 1102; CVSG June 18, 2012; cert. opposed Dec. 21, 2012; cert. denied Jan. 22, 2013). Whether a substantive state-law insurance standard saved from preemption under the insurance saving clause of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act ("ERISA"), 29 U.S.C. § 1144(b)(2)(A), can be enforced through state-law remedies or instead is enforceable exclusively through ERISA's enforcement scheme, 29 U.S.C. § 1132.

8. GlaxoSmithKline v. Classen Immunotherapies, Inc.*, No. 11-1078 (Fed. Cir., 659 F.3d 1057; CVSG June 25, 2012; cert. opposed Dec. 13, 2012; cert. denied Jan. 14, 2013). Whether the Federal Circuit's interpretation of 35 U.S.C. § 271(e)(1)'s safe harbor from patent infringement liability for drugs – an interpretation which arbitrarily restricts the safe harbor to pre-marketing approval of generic counterparts – is faithful to statutory text that contains no such limitation and decisions of this Court rejecting similar efforts to impose extra-textual limitations on the statute.

9. Retractable Technologies v. Becton, Dickinson & Co.*, No. 11-1154 (Fed. Cir., 653 F.3d 1296; CVSG June 29, 2012; cert. opposed Nov. 28, 2012; cert. denied Jan. 7, 2013). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether a court may depart from the plain and ordinary meaning of a term in a patent claim based on language in the patent specification, where the patentee has neither expressly disavowed the plain meaning of the claim term nor expressly defined the term in a way that differs from its plain meaning. (2) Whether claim construction, including underlying factual issues that are integral to claim construction, is a purely legal question subject to de novo review on appeal.

10. Chadbourne & Parke LLP v. Troice*, No. 12-79; Willis of Colorado Inc. v. Troice, No. 12-86; Proskauer Rose LLP v. Troice, No. 12-88 (5th Cir., 675 F.3d 503; CVSG Oct. 1, 2012; cert. opposed Dec. 14, 2012; cert. granted Jan. 18, 2013). The Questions Presented are: (1) Whether the Securities Litigation Uniform Standards Act of 1998 ("SLUSA"), 15 U.S.C. §§ 77p(b), 78bb(f)(1), prohibits private class actions based on state law only where the alleged purchase or sale of a covered security is "more than tangentially related" to the "heart, crux or gravamen" of the alleged fraud. (2) Whether the SLUSA precludes a class action in which the defendant is sued for aiding and abetting fraud, but a non-party, rather than the defendant, made the only alleged misrepresentation in connection with a covered securities transaction.

Gibson Dunn – Counsel for FMR, LLC

11. Lawson v. FMR, LLC*, No. 12-3 (1st Cir., 670 F.3d 61; CVSG Oct. 9, 2012; cert. opposed Apr. 9, 2013; cert. granted May 20, 2013). Whether an employee of a privately held contractor or subcontractor of a public company is protected from retaliation by Section 806 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act, 18 U.S.C. § 1514A.

Supreme Court Statistics:

Gibson Dunn has a strong and high-profile presence before the Supreme Court of the United States, appearing numerous times in the past decade in a variety of cases on behalf of the nation's leading corporations, U.S. states, presidential candidates, and others. Gibson Dunn has had more than 100 Supreme Court arguments among the firm's active lawyers. Moreover, while the grant rate for certiorari petitions is below 1%, Gibson Dunn's certiorari petitions have captured the Court's attention: Gibson Dunn has persuaded the Court to grant its certiorari petitions nearly forty percent of the time in the last five years.

Appellate and Constitutional Law Group Co-Chairs:

Theodore B. Olson - Washington, D.C. (202.955.8500, tolson@gibsondunn.com)
Theodore J. Boutrous, Jr. - Los Angeles (213.229.7000, tboutrous@gibsondunn.com)
Daniel M. Kolkey - San Francisco (415.393.8200, dkolkey@gibsondunn.com)
Thomas G. Hungar - Washington, D.C. (202.955.8500, thungar@gibsondunn.com)
Miguel A. Estrada - Washington, D.C. (202.955.8500, mestrada@gibsondunn.com)

© 2013 Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher LLP

Attorney Advertising: The enclosed materials have been prepared for general informational purposes only and are not intended as legal advice.

www.gibsondunn.com

Beijing • Brussels • Century City • Dallas • Denver • Dubai • Hong Kong • London • Los Angeles • Munich
New York • Orange County • Palo Alto • Paris • San Francisco • São Paulo • Singapore • Washington, D.C.